Grand Jury Hears Barrett In Gambling Investigation

Chief Is Summoned In Surprise Move; Bernice Franklin Is Another Witness

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The special gambling grand jury summoned Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett as a surprise witness yesterday, less than 24 hours after he had publicly belittled the jury's value.

Barrett spent more than 30 minutes before the jury and United States Attorney George Morris Fay. He emerged grinning with his finger pressed to his lips and refused comment.

Both Fay and Barrett declined to comment when asked if the police chief had been asked to appear or whether he had appeared at his own request.

Tuesday, the police chief promised newsmen a report which, he said, "will show we have done as much or more in an ordinary month than what's been done in 10 months by them."

Barrett Quizzes Reporters

Soon after Barrett was released by the grand jury, he and his special assistant, Daniel B. Maher, who will draft the police anti-gambling report, started questioning police reporters as to what actually had been said at Tuesday's press conference.

Both Barrett and Maher individually asked The Washington Post police reporter whether Barrett had said that "they" referred to Fay and the grand jury.

A transcript of The Washington Post reporter's notes on the conference shows that Barrett was asked if the "10 months" was correct and what he meant by "them." At this moment a reporter for another newspaper interrupted and said that "'them' refers to Fay and the grand jury." Barrett did not contradict this statement, and went on to confirm that "10 months" was correct.

Other Witnesses

Other witnesses before yesterday's grand jury session included:

Red-headed Bernice Franklin, the Government's star witness;

A. K. Mitchell, superintendent of Western Union;

A man identified only as an associate of Howard's Sports Daily, a Baltimore wire service which provides up-to-the-minute horse race results by teletype and wires leased from Western Union;

Murray Olf, described by Fay as a key figure in State Wide Sports Distributors, the second race wire service in Maryland.

And Wilfred Barrett, 24-year-old law student, who has served as an undercover agent for Fay during the 10-month grand jury probe which was capped last Friday by eight simultaneous raids and has produced 33 arrests in six days.

Fay Warns Landlords

Meanwhile, Fay announced that he had written letters to "more than 25" property owners, warning them he has evidence that gambling "has been and is now being carried on" on their premises. As owners, he said, they are subject to criminal prosecution if they countenance violation of the gambling statutes on their premises.

The letters quoted sections of the

D. C. Record Set In Car Tag Sale

With one day to go, the sale of new District auto tags climbed yesterday to a new all-time high of 137,322 for the month of March.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said 5368 sets of tags were sold yesterday, and that during the rush hours the waiting lines extended for half a block. Nobody had to wait more than 36 minutes, he declared.

Mason Urges U. S. Loans for New Buildings

A long-range public works program, financed at little or no interest by the Federal Government, was proposed yesterday by District Commissioner Guy Mason.

The Commissioner said he favored "something like the Capper-Cramton Act" under which the District secured many playgrounds and recreation areas on long-term loans from the Federal treasury.

The program would include replacement of present welfare buildings, "which are a disgrace," erection of schools as recommended in the recent Strayer report, police stations and similar buildings needed in the city, Mason explained.

Some Buildings 'Terrible'

"The buildings we've got now, in many instances, are terrible," he declared. "It is costing us as much to repair some buildings as to operate them. We have a fine facade along Pennsylvania avenue. Behind are the dirtiest slums in the world. The Redevelopment Act will help on the housing slums, but we need other funds to take care of the rest.

"After all, this is the capital of the United States, the capital of the 48 States, and it should be a decent place."

Mason said he has not yet discussed the proposal with his fellow Commissioners, but declared he plans to do so shortly, probably after the Senate acts on the District revenue bill.

The Commissioner said such a loan could also be used to make immediate payments of the $330-a-year retroactive pay raise to the District's 18,000 workers, if this is approved by Congress.

Loan Cheaper for U. S.

The repayment of the loan would be secured by the anticipated yield from the sales tax, which has passed the House and is now before the Senate, he explained. Other cities have bond issues to permit capital improvements, but the District may be able to borrow from the Federal Treasury at little or no interest since it does not have to issue bonds to obtain funds, Mason declared.

A loan would be cheaper for the Federal Government, too, in that it would be repaid, while an increased annual Federal contribution, as has been advocated by some Congressmen, would be an outright gift, Commissioner Mason declared.

A long-term loan would result in the "children of today getting the benefit of good facilities which they would help pay for when their children entered school. It would get the job done and not charge it to one generation," Mason declared.

Navy Circles Fear Threat to New Carrier

Navy circles were aroused yesterday over new Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's cryptic statement on the controversial question of Air Force versus Naval Aviation roles and missions.

They wondered whether or not the Navy's super aircraft carrier—the keel of which is to be laid this spring—was in danger.

Johnson said at his first press conference as Defense Secretary Tuesday that he had "a fairly firm conviction" on what the respective jobs of the Air Force and Navy air arm should be in wartime. He added that the heads of the armed forces would have the opportunity of arguing him out of his views during the next few days.

Then he announced that the Joint Chiefs of Staff would meet with him at Key West, Fla., within a few days. It was at the Florida Little White House that the present agreement on air roles and missions was reached a year ago.

The Defense Chief would not explain his statement, but immediately Navy men jumped to the conclusion that this basic issue between the armed forces was to be raised anew and a different procedure laid down by the new civil military chief.

Any decision to stop work on the new 65,000 to 85,000-ton flattop would immediately raise a storm that undoubtedly would extend from top Navy circles to their friends throughout the Nation. The carrier is regarded as basic to the future of the Navy as a major arm of defense.

Film Producers To Stop Paying Bill for 'Oscars'

New York, March 30 (AP).—Five top movie producers said tonight they were stopping their contributions to "Oscar" awards in order to remove "any suspicion of company influence."

The statement was issued in reply to Jean Hersholt, retiring president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Hersholt said producers were withdrawing financial support because "voices in the industry" wanted "to make commercial pictures unhampered by considerations of artistic excellence."

The producers' statement was signed by Nicholas M. Schenck of Loew's; Barney Balaban, Paramount; Spyros P. Skouras, Twentieth Century-Fox; Maj. Albert Warner, Warner Brothers, and Ned Depinet, RKO.

Gas Company President Leaps to Death

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Marcy L. Sperry, 71-year-old president of the Washington Gas Light Co., yesterday leaped to his death from the Massachusetts ave. bridge on what was to have been the last day as active head of the local utility.

Members of Mr. Sperry's family said the gas company executive had resigned his position as president of the firm, effective today, and was to take over the newly created post of chairman of the board.

Failing Eyesight

They said he had suffered greatly within the past few years because of failing eyesight. Recently, he also had begun to lose his hearing, and purchased a hearing aid.

Clarence Aspinwall, 2340 Kalorama rd. nw., brother-in-law of Mrs. Sperry, said he believed Mr. Sperry had leaped to his death because "I suppose he felt he would be more of a hindrance than a help to his wife and daughters, because of his infirmities."

District Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide yesterday afternoon.

Aspinwall said Mr. and Mrs. Sperry dined at their home on Tuesday night, and that Mr. Sperry had been in "excellent" spirits. Mrs. Aspinwall said he had been talking of summer plans.

Arise Early

He arose early yesterday and left the house before breakfast, explaining that he had an early meeting at the office, and would breakfast downtown.

Washington Gas Light Co. officials said Mr. Sperry was to attend a meeting of the board of directors yesterday morning. The company already had been informed of his resignation, and the directors had

Defense Fund Boost of 1.5 Billions Urged

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A fight to boost next year's military budget by more than 1½ billion dollars—largely to provide stronger air power—was launched on Capitol Hill yesterday.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee told Congress that President Truman's 14.7 billion defense spending plan endangered national security.

Calling for an additional $1,599,600,000 for the Army, Navy and Air Force, the Congressman proposed giving the armed forces 101,000 more men, 11 more Air Force and Navy plane groups, 67 more operating ships and funds to buy 1220 additional warplanes.

Vinson declared that the Bureau of the Budget had cut the "rock-bottom" estimate of needs prepared by the Joint Chiefs of Staff by $2,674,000,000 and urged the Nation to listen to its military leaders rather than fiscal officers.

Blasts Practice

"It looks to me that we are already returning to our historic practice of failing to maintain even adequate forces in time of peace," Vinson declared. "We can ill afford in these troubled days to so blithely ignore the views of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as is proposed in the President's budget."

The Georgia Congressman—an influential figure on Capitol Hill—apeared before the House Appropriations Committee Monday behind closed doors. Presumably, he gave them the same argument as yesterday he put into the Congressional Record. The committee is "marking up" the defense spending bill for presentation to the House within a few days.

Vinson's lengthy statement analyzed the President's budget and proposed adding $1,599,600,000 which would:

Illegal Coffee Deals in Reich Charged to Maj. Gen. Bissell

Frankfurt, Germany, March 30 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell of the United States Air Force has been charged with dealing illegally in coffee in Germany, his attorney disclosed here today.

The attorney, John E. Hughes of Washington and Chicago, denied the charge and predicted a military inquiry now under way will prove it to be utterly unfounded.

"The whole thing is only a tempest in a teapot," he said. "The only coffee General Bissell ever sold was in the legal barter market set up by the Army to alleviate the economic conditions in Germany."

Hughes said the formal charge against Bissell is "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman." This is in accord with routine procedure when allegations against an officer are to be investigated.

The United States Air Force announced earlier today that charges had been filed concerning "acts allegedly committed while Bissell was military and air attache at the United States Embassy in London from May, 1946, to July, 1948."

It said these were being investigated to determine whether he should be brought before a court-martial. The investigation is being made by Maj. Gen. Edwin B. Lyon. The Air Force withheld details. However, the Air Force in Wash-

Significance of Dream Books Studied by Appeals Court

Annapolis, Md., March 30 (AP).—Six judges of the Court of Appeals today studied the significance of "dream books" in the numbers game.

The high court considered the appeal of Lillian Catherine Johnson of 501 Ritchie ave., Silver Spring, from a conviction of gambling charges.

Montgomery County police testified they found numbers, or policy lottery slips in the house along with several dream books entitled "The Big Four General," "Policy Pete's Special," and others.

Corpl. Carroll V. Miller had said in Montgomery County Circuit Court these books offered tips on the numbers game.

One book listed "Frying Pan—511." Miller said that means if you dream about a frying pan you bet on No. 511 the next day.

The Appeals Court took this testimony under consideration.

Lillian Johnson contended six policemen illegally searched the house last September 25 without a search warrant. She asked the court to reverse a six-month jail term and $500 fine on charges of possessing lottery slips and three months and a $300 fine.

2 Houses Deadlocked On Longer-Term Law; Truman Signs U.S. Bill

Sees Blow at Lobbyists

President Praises Congress For 'Effective' Rent Action

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Praising Congress for its work, President Truman last night signed the new rent control bill into law.

The Chief Executive called the measure "effective" and said its passage represented "a crushing defeat for the real estate lobby."

President Truman also pointed out that the new law will make it possible to curb the black market in rents. His statement was regarded as especially significant since Capitol Hill had already heard predictions that enactment of the new law would touch off a Government crackdown on what Rent Control Administrator Tighe E. Woods had described as a growing black market in rents.

Bearing out the predictions of Administration leaders in Congress, the President had only words of approval for the new law despite the fact it extended controls for 15 months instead of the 24 he asked.

Its passage marked the first of President Truman's major campaign promises which the Democratically-controlled Congress has redeemed in three months of work.

"The passage of this effective rent control law clearly demonstrates the purpose of the Congress to maintain adequate protection for tenants until the housing shortage is relieved," Mr. Truman said.

Then he added, "By this action, the Congress has reemphasized the necessity for prompt enactment of legislation which will help relieve the housing shortage."

The Chief Executive did not refrain from taking another crack at the "real estate lobby" with which he has been sparring for some time.

"The act," he said, "was passed by Congress despite the propaganda barrage which was designed to destroy rent control altogether. In its final form, it represents a crushing defeat for the real estate lobby."

Mr. Truman's message was redolent of good will toward the Congress.

"This act," he said, "is a result of the joint efforts of the Congress and the Administration to find an equitabe solution for a difficult problem. While affording more effective protection to tenants against illegal or unjustified rent increases, the act also facili-

Senate and House Pass Emergency Resolution on Eve Of Expiration Date

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

In emergency moves, both houses of Congress last night passed and sent to the President a joint resolution extending for 30 days the present District rent control law.

The local rent law is due to expire tonight at midnight. It took exactly 14 minutes for the stopgap measure to clear the House and Senate.

The temporary expedient became necessary late yesterday when a day-long conference between the two Houses deadlocked over the Senate's watered-down version of the new District rent measure extending controls until June 30, 1950. The House conferees insisted on retaining key provisions of the existing law.

Six Amendments Tacked on

Six amendments sponsored by Senator Joseph W. McCarthy (R., Wis.) to make the District measure conform with the National rent law were tacked onto the District of Columbia measure Tuesday.

The House-Senate conference meeting deadlocked over the principal Senate change in the District rent bill—insertion of the national rent language to allow landlords a "fair net operating income."

House conferees would retain the provision which calls for comparable rent ceilings for comparable housing without regard to variance in the net operating income of different landlords.

District Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell, who sat in on yesterday's conference meeting, said that the national rent language applied locally would mean "imposing another increase over and above the many increases we already have granted here."

Would Require Huge Staff

He explained further that a "huge staff of experts" would be required to determine fair market values of all the rental properties in the city before he could decide what would be a "fair net operating income."

"We have always adjusted rents on basis of increased taxes, operating and maintenance cost increases," said Cogswell. "But under the national language we would have to add the new factor of landlords' capital investment, equity and amortization fees."

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), who managed the bill in the Senate and had "reluctantly accepted the "weakening" McCarthy riders, told reporters after the conference deadlock:

"A careful second reading of the amendments dropped on me on the Senate floor indicates that they will have a far more serious effect than I first thought."

The conferees did resolve differences on the other five Senate amendments, all of which mean

ECA Program Threatened by 2-Party Split

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A split on both sides of the Senate aisle last night threatened to deal the ECA program its first setback—a 10 per cent cut in European Recovery funds.

So close was the division that the Senate recessed overnight to permit a vote canvass before the $5,430,000,000 aid authorization meets its first test.

Counter Moves

As the proposed 543-million-dollar cut, jointly sponsored by Senators Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), picked up more Southern Democratic and conservative GOP support, these counter moves were taken to combat it:

1. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who hasn't tangled with Taft this session, prepared to take the floor against the Senate GOP policy chairman's move. Vandenberg is said to fear a split at this time would really mean two cuts—one in the ECA authorization and another by the Appropriations Committee.

2. Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) and the Democratic chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tom Connally (Tex.) worked hand-in-glove to avert rebirth of the familiar coalition pattern on a foreign policy issue.

Deeper Cut Proposed

An even deeper cut of nearly two billion dollars, meanwhile was proposed by Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), who told the Senate the threat of communism is "definitely diminishing" in western Europe.

Wherry's amendment would cut the program to $3,638,000,000, and spread this over a 12-month instead of a 15-month period.

The Nebraskan proposed to eliminate altogether the $1,150,000,000 authorization for the next three months plus a 150-million-dollar contract authorization. The balance provided for ECA would then be trimmed 15 per cent.

Bipartisan supporters of ECA appeared confident of defeating the deeper cut but conceded the test

Bevin Hails Pact as 'Real Solidarity'

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Britain's Ernest Bevin, terming the North Atlantic Treaty the creation of "real solidarity for the West," arrived here yesterday, as the pact participants rounded out to the expected 12 nations.

Iceland and Portgual yesterday officially announced they will join in the treaty-signing ceremony here on Monday.

These developments came as Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) declared in a radio address that the security pact might increase the chance of another world war, and called on the Senate and the public for a "complete discussion" of the issues before binding the Nation to abide by it.

He said that despite provisions to reserve to Congress the right to declare war, if the country adopts the treaty "we should do so with the frank admission that we are committing ourselves to go to war if Russia attacks one of the western European nations."

He expressed fear that the agreement's terms, covering a 20-year period, might "make us a policeman for all western Europe" even if Russia becomes peaceful in the meantime.

Representatives of Iceland and Portugal, the new adherents to the pact, will arrive in Washington in time for the top-level conference of foreign ministers which Secretary of State Dean Acheson has scheduled for Saturday to make final plans for the signing and methods of putting the pact into effect.

No demonstration marked the arrival at Union Station of Foreign Minister Bevin, in contrast to the picketing and egg and tomato throwing that greeted him in New York. Two dozen policemen and detectives were on hand to prevent any disturbance.

The burly, outspoken Labor Party leader, wearing his dark framed glasses, was welcomed here by British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks and State Department officials, and told reporters:

"I'm glad to be back in Washington now, especially in view of the task that confronts us. Monday will be a great historical day, for

Rest Prescribed in Illness Hinting Polio Possibility

New York, March 30 (AP).—Rest is smart medicine for anyone getting a fever, headache, sore throat, or stomach upset in the polio season.

They may well be signs of sickness other than polio. Rest will help recovery. But if they are the first signs of polio, then rest is especially helpful.

This was pointed up today by speakers at the American College of Physicians' annual session.

Dr. David P. Bodian of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine reported that nerve cells damaged by polio virus often recover even after bad paralysis. How much they recover and how long it takes depends on the strain of virus.

He said "there is suggestive evidence that fatigue will push the injured cells beyond the point of recovery."

Dr. John R. Paul of Yale University School of Medicine said a recent study "makes it clear that exertion during the early stages of acute poliomyelitis tends to increase the severity of the paralysis."

14,000 to Hear Churchill Talk In Boston Tonight

Cambridge, Mass., March 30.—Winston Churchill will deliver what he called "a speech of some importance" on Thursday night.

The scene will be Boston Garden, where 14,000 seats have been reserved for alumni and guests of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, sponsors of the "International Midcentury Convocation on the Social Implications of Scientific Progress."

The Churchill speech will begin at 9 p. m. EST and will be broadcast by NBC, ABC and Mutual and telecast by NBC, ABC, CBS and Mutual.

Churchill's last American address was on March 5, 1946, in Fulton, Mo., where he delivered his "iron curtain" broadside against Russia.

Tonight Churchill attended a dinner in his honor given by Bernard Baruch.

Advisers Indorse Voice of America

LLOYD BERKNER,
a wartime Navy captain, was named yesterday by Secretary of State Dean Acheson as special assistant to direct the proposed new U. S. Army aid program being worked out in connecton with the North Atlantic Pact

Millions of people behind the Iron Curtain listen to the Voice of America, and pass on what they hear, the Advisory Commission on Information reported yesterday.

In countries which have been overrun by the Soviets, said the commission:

"The very fact that the United States sends in daily broadcasts and tries to disseminate information by books, magazines, movies and news bulletins is considered as evidence that we mean business in our stand against communism and Russian domination of Europe."

In Free Europe

In free countries of western Europe, the commission reported to Congress, the Voice is not nearly as effective as behind the Iron Curtain, chiefly because of competition from excellent local broadcasts. Motion pictures, magazines and libraries are effective, however, especially movies among the highly illiterate populations of Italy, Greece and Spain.

As the result of a survey in Europe by Mark A. May, a member of the commission, it was determined that:

1. In Poland, where there is an average of one radio set to 40 persons, the Voice has an estimated daily audience of a million people who spread the word to another million.

Number of Listeners

2. In Czechoslovakia, the Voice may reach more than one tenth of the population, since there is one radio for every seven or eight persons.

3. In Yugoslavia there is about one set to every 75 persons. No estimate was possible on the number of listeners.

Although May did not report on conditions in Russia, the commission concluded from other evidence that "the Voice of America reaches millions of Russians today and the magazine Amerika circulates far beyond its 50,000 purchasers."

Without these means of reaching the Russian people, the commission concludes, "our battle would not be a contest, even a losing one. We would lose out entirely and only too quickly."

Way Russians React

The report quoted former Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith as saying:

"The average Russian, being 100 per cent peasant origin, believes what he reads and hears. He believes what he reads in the Russian papers and he also believes what he reads in the Amerika magazine; he believes what he hears over the Russian radio and what he hears over the Voice of America. And since those are in a state of conflict, he is in a confused mental state.

"However, no matter what we do we cannot compete entirely with Soviet propaganda, so in the long view, unless it is changed, the trend is going to be toward hostility. Now it is one of rather, let us say, a hurt friendliness. They wonder why we're doing all those horrible things."

Lack of Funds Cited

The commission told Congress the United States information program was important, effective "as far as it goes" but not adequate because of lack of funds and personnel. It said that information must have a place in national policy "consistent with the scope of the military and economic programs" before policy will be balanced.

Besides May, members of the commission are Erwin D. Canham, acting chairman; Philip D. Reed and Justin Miller. Mark Ethridge, the chairman, is on leave, serving on the U. N. Conciliation Commission in Palestine.

'Hill' Shelves Truman Plan

(NYHT News Service).

President Truman's anti-inflation program has been quietly shelved by Democratic congressional leaders—apparently without the President's direct knowledge or approval.

Administration leaders on Capitol Hill freely admitted—in private—yesterday that they had laid aside for this session the President's demands for stand-by price and wage controls and similar anti-inflation steps.

"We decided there was no longer a ghost of a chance that Congress would approve such measures in the face of the many current signs of deflation," a top-ranking Democrat declared.

He added most members of Congress were now more concerned that some antideflationary program might be needed to head off a possible recession and step-up lagging production in some fields.

The President's top legislative lieutenants made it clear that Monday's cut in margin requirements on the stock exchange from 75 to 50 per cent and the recent relaxation of credit controls, coupled with the other evidences of a deflation trend, had killed their hopes for congressional approval of any new inflation controls.

They declined to be quoted directly on the ground they had not discussed the situation and their decision with Mr. Truman.

UNRRA Ends 5½-Year Life

UNRRA, the first postwar relief organization, ended 5½ years of life yesterday after turning over its remaining funds to various successors.

The Central Committee of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, meeting at the Hay-Adams House, voted it out of existence after it had spent nearly four billion dollars in direct aid throughout the world. Its funds were contributed by member governments.

During its lifetime, a report showed, UNRRA spent $3,968,392,725 for supplies, services and administrative costs. Of this sum, the United States contributed $2,668,269,449.

it will mean the creation of a real solidarity of the west.

"What all you good people have to do now is to create a great American and European public opinion (to support the pact), then you will have peace for a long time."

In addition to the United States, Great Britain, Iceland and Portugal, the pact signatories will be Canada, France, Norway, Italy, Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

The White House announced yesterday that President Truman will address the ceremony in the departmental auditorium, speaking for 10 minutes, some time after 4:30 p. m. Monday. The proceedings will start about 3 p. m., and each Foreign Minister may speak briefly before signing the 20-year defense alliance.

Italy's Foreign Minister, Count Carlo Sforza, was the first to arrive here, coming on Monday. He returned to New York temporarily, after a conference with Acheson. The representatives of the Netherlands, France, Luxembourg and Denmark are due today, with the other Foreign Ministers arriving tomorrow.

Limousines from the British Embassy met Bevin and his party upon their arrival at 2:30 p. m. and took them to the embassy. At 2:30 today, Bevin is scheduled to confer with Secretary Acheson, and later in the day Acheson will meet with the Netherlands' Foreign Minister, D. U. Stikker, who is scheduled to arrive at Union Station at 2:25 p. m. today.

In the next week or so, Acheson said at his press conference yesterday, he plans to hold a broad series of policy meetings with the Foreign Ministers, and with the pact-signing there will be an increasing number of meetings with foreign representatives at all levels.

On Friday, he will meet with Robert Schuman, Premier of France, Acheson said, and probably the same day he will confer with Paul-Henri Spaak, Premier and Foreign Minister of Belgium, and Luxembourg's Foreign Minister, Joseph Bech.

These talks, said Acheson, will involve the treaty itself, the European Recovery Program, the disposition of Italy's prewar colonies—which will come before the United Nations General Assembly meeting in New York on Tuesday—and German policy.

The broad purposes of this Nation's policy on Germany, he said, are clear:

1. To keep Germany from again developing into a position where it will menace the world's peace.

2. To integrate Germany into the European community of nations, and give increasing responsibility to the Germans themselves.

The top-level talks, he said, while on an informal basis, should provide real progress toward a coordinated policy on the complex issue of administering western Germany.

One topic certain to be featured in the meetings is the extent and method of arms aid to be extended by the United States to pact members under legislation now being drafted.

Acheson announced yesterday that Lloyd V. Berkner, executive secretary of the Joint Research and Development Board in 1946, and now associated with the Carnegie Institution of Washington, has been appointed a special assistant to the Secretary of State to coordinate the military aid programming.

Berkner will replace Assistant Secretary of State Ernest A. Gross in that work, leaving Gross free to give all his time to his congressional liaison activities.

While it is generally believed that the military aid program—expected to meet strong opposition in Congress—will seek a first year authorization of one to 1½ billion dollars for pact countries, no actual figure is yet available.

Acheson said that while authority probably will be sought for a long-range program, funds will be asked for only the first year, to start. No countries would be specified by name according to present plans, which would give the President full authority to supply the arms aid where he sees fit.

As yet, said Acheson, "no final decision has been reached as to whether the authorization will be sought on an area or a global basis."

It was previously indicated that the same legislation would also permit arms to be supplied to such nonpact countries as Greece, Turkey and Iran.

Taft's War Fears

In his MBS broadcast, Senator Taft said he is concerned whether this Nation has made any commitments to rearm the countries of western Europe and take part in a land war in Europe.

"We are told that military plans are being made," he continued. "Do they involve our sending millions of men to fight on European soil against Russia?

"Many experts feel that our part in the war should be confined to the air, and that we should not try to march to Moscow as did Napoleon and Hitler.

"Whatever may be our final decision in case of war, I certainly do not feel that we should commit ourselves to any particular military plan or character of operation."

Iceland's Parliament Votes to Join Alliance

Rekjavik, Iceland, March 30 (AP). Iceland's Althing (parliament) today approved this strategic island republic's membership in the North Atlantic Pact, 37 to 13.

Communists threw stones and broke windows while the deputies debated inside.

Foreign Minister Bjarni Benediktsson was expected to leave for Washington Thursday to sign.

3 Held in Egg Throwing as Bevin Arrives

New York, March 30 (NYHT).—The North Atlantic Security Pact "should prevent war for many generations to come" but peace depends also on unity among nations of the Western world, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin said today when he arrived here in the Queen Mary.

"This is not one nation giving something to another," Bevin said. "All are in a common pool."

His sentiments were echoed by the foreign ministers of the three Benelux countries: Paul-Henri Spaak, of Belgium, Dirk U. Stikker, of the Netherlands, and Joseph Bech, of Luxembourg.

All said that "of course" they had spoken to Andrei A. Gromyko, head of the Soviet Union delegation to the United Nations, during the voyage but there had been no discussion of international affairs.

Gromyko had "no comment" except that the U. N. was "about the same." Asked by photographers to smile, he replied, "I could but it would be artificial."

Picket lines, set up by the Joint Commttee to Combat Anti-Semitism and other organizations, marched opposite Pier 90, carrying placards with such slogans as "Bevin's anti-Semitism, England's shame," and "First Oliver Twist, now Bevin."

When automobiles carrying the British group started out eggs and tomatoes were hurled at the cars. Police arrested three students and charged them with disorderly conduct.

In a press conference aboard ship, Bevin spoke at some length in asserting that the North Atlantic treaty will strengthen the United Nations.

Concerning Israel and the Palestine problem he pointed out that this is now in the hands of the United Nations and "we are out of it."

Spaak said "I'm convinced that since the end of the war and the organization of the United Nations, the Atlantic pact is the world's most important step toward collective security."

Asked whether the treaty may not actually bring war closer, he snapped, "Certainly not."

Stikker and Bech took substantially the same position.

Bech implied that he and the other Foreign Ministers had discussed a Mediterranean alliance, but would say only that "it can't talk about a thing while it is forming."

Schuman to Insist France Be Keystone

Paris, March 30 (AP).—A cabinet spokesman said today Foreign Minister Robert Schuman intends to insist that France be made the keystone of the defense of western Europe.

He will demand the French army be equipped for that role, the spokesman said. Schuman left for Washington today to sign the North Atlantic Alliance Treaty. He will remain in the United States until Easter to talk over implementation of the treaty.

The spokesman disclosed Schuman's policy less than 24 hours after Gen. Charles de Gaulle, a foe of the government, had demanded that France be given priority in American arms shipments.

Churchill Denies He Fought Against U. S.

Winston Churchill emphatically denied yesterday a statement that he fought against the United States during the Spanish-American War.

The statement was made Monday by Senator Langer (D., N. Dak.) during Senate debate on the foreign aid bill.

The former British Prime Minister, in a telegram to Senator Connally (D., Tex.) declared the charge was "utterly devoid of truth."

Connally placed Churchill's reply in the Congressional Record.

During Monday's debate Langer interrupted a speech by Senator Jenner (R., Ind.). He asked whether Jenner knew that during the Spanish-American War "the same Winston Churchill who brags that he is half American took up arms for Spain and fought against the United States and did all he could to defeat us?"

Jenner replied that he did not blame Churchill, that "he was representing his country," and "was doing what he thought best for his country."

Churchill, who is now visiting in New York, said in his telegram:

"The statement made by Mr. Langer is entirely devoid of the truth. I visited Cuba and was with the Spanish army as an observer during the months of November and December, 1895.

"There was then no question of the United States being involved in a war with Spain. This war did not in fact begin until February, 1898, or more than two years after I had left Cuba.

"I should be grateful if you felt able to contradict this false charge by stating the facts to the Senate so that the truth appears in your record."

Connally, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told the Senate he had notified Langer ahead of time that there would be something of interest to him coming up in the Senate yesterday.

Langer leaped to his feet immediately after Connally finished. He started to speak but was reminded that Senator Malone (R., Nev.) had the floor.

"I don't care who has the floor," shouted Langer, his face flushed, "I am going to reply."

Malone apparently was willing to let Langer have his way, but he already had let Senator Williams (R., Del.) interrupt to make a statement on another matter. Willams was nearly through and wanted to finish.

But Langer, impatient, suddenly shouted that "I am not going to beg anybody for a chance to reply."

With that he turned on his heel and stomped angrily up the Senate aisle, flinging over his shoulder, "I'll reply tomorrow."

He sat down at a desk in the rear of the chamber, banging a book on the desk. While Williams finished his statement, Langer stalked out of the Senate chamber.

Syrian Army Upsets Rule Without Fight

Shukri Kuwatly — Gen. Husni Zayim
Figures in coup

By Simon Allawerdi

Damascus, Syria, March 30 (AP). The Syrian army overthrew the government without a fight today and arrested many high officials.

Brig. Husni Zayim, chief of staff of the army, said the dawn coup was to deliver Syria from "despotism" and would not interfere with previous foreign engagements.

This was taken to mean Syria will go ahead with negotiations for an armistice with Israel.

Surfew Clamped

A curfew was clamped on the country at 6 a. m., the moment the revolt was successful. A government of undersecrataries carried on while Zayim sought the advice of Faris el Khouri, president of Parliament and former Premier, on formation of a new cabinet.

United States Minister James Hugh Keeley, jr., reported to Washington from Damascus that President Al Sayed Shukri Al Kuwatly, Premier Khaled Bey Azem and the entire cabinet were arrested.

(The revolt posed a question of what will happen to the proposed construction by the Arabian-American Oil Co. of a Trans-Arabian pipeline from the Persian Gulf Across Syria to the Mediterranean.)

(Reports from Trans-Jordan said President Kuwatly had been removed to Mazza Prison. Prince Adel Arsalan was said in Amman to be the most likely choice to establish a new government.)

Brig. Zayim was a colonel when he succeeded Abdullah Attfeh as chief of staff last May 24, soon after the outbreak of war in Palestine. He formerly was chief of security and of police.

(Arab sources at Lake Success said he is a politically independent professional soldier who fought in the Arab revolt against the Turks in the first World War and for Vichy forces in 1941 in Syria. He was trained at the French Military Academy of St. Cyr. He is 50 years old.)

"Elder Statesman"

El Khouri, upon whom he is relying for advice, is a 70-year-old "elder statesman" who represented his country in the United Nations from 1946 until the end of 1948.

Zayim said the army was "compelled to undertake this change of regime because of attacks against the army inside, as well as outside the house of representatives." He said these attacks misrepresented the army.

In addition, he declared, the people were discontented with the government and the personalities in it.

"Our movement is purely local and has no foreign implication whatsoever" he said. "We are not power seekers or suporters of dictatorial rule. As soon as a new cabinet is formed, which we are seeking at preesnt with the advice of Faris el Khouri, we shall transfer power to them."

At the same time he sent a message to Secretary General Tryge Lie of the United Nations saying the army had intervened to put an end to "internal anarchy," and confirming the country's attachment to it former engagements.

Army Gives Aim

An arm communique said "our supreme desire is to safeguard the independence of our country and deliver her from the despotism and bluff of the present rule and prepare for her a really democratic rule."

Mobs ran riot in the capital for three days last December, demanding resumption of the war with Israel. Fears were expressed that Syria might be absorbed into a "greater Syria," headed by King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan.

The government of Jamil Mardam Bey, who had promised an easy victory in Palestine, was toppled. The army took over control temporarily to restore order, and Khaled Bey Azem organized a new cabinet.

Syria has had her independence only since 1941. Previously she was ruled by France under a League of Nations mandate.

West Agrees To 'Reprieve' German Plants

London, March 30 (AP).—Western power negotiators today concluded an agreement aimed at harnessing west Germany's industrial might to the European Recovery Program.

A series of meetings between high American, British and French officials ended today. The three powers were reported agreed to:

Reprieve between 150 and 155 west German industries due to have been dismantled and distributed as war reparations.

Revise the list of warlike industries disallowed Germany under the Potsdam Pact.

Raise the gross tonnage of German-constructed ships from its present level of 1500 to about 9000.

The agreement will have to be approved by American, British and French governments.

The negotiations have been conducted by the American and French Ambassadors, Lewis W. Douglas and Rene Massigli, and Sir Ivone Kirkpatrick of the British Foreign Office.

Soviet Envoy To Be Boss in Russian Zone

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, March 30 (NYHT).—The Soviet Union's highest civilian representative in Germany—Ambassador Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary W. S. Semjonov—is expected from now on to wield the real executive power in the Russian occupation.

This, according to most Western observers, will be the administrative effect of the promotion of Marshal Vassilly D. Sokolovsky, Soviet zone commander, to Moscow as First Deputy Minister of the Soviet Armed Forces and his replacement by a general of comparative political inexperience—Gen. W. I. Chuikov, who was formerly commander of the Russian troops in the Soviet zone province of Thuringia. General Chiukov distinguished himself in the battle of Stalingrad.

Ambassador Semjonov has already taken over a number of functions formerly exercised by Marshal Sokolovsky.

The key role to be played in Germany by a Russian civilian of high rank fits in with the anticipated formation of an east German state, the constitution of which will be voted on in the middle of May, according to an announcement made tonight.

Sergeant Convicted As Black Marketeer

Burtonwood, England, March 30 (U.P.).—Technical Sergt. Joseph Murphy of El Paso, Texas, was convicted by a U. S. Air Forces court-martial today on charges of black marketeering.

Murphy was charged with attempting to sell 55 cartons of American cigarettes to a British subject. The court sentenced him, subject to confirmation, to forfeit two-thirds of his monthly pay for six months.

Yugoslavs Accuse Bulgarians Of Repeated Border Attacks

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 30 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito's government accused the Communist regime in neighboring Bulgaria tonight of instigating "repeated brutal attacks" on Yugoslav militiamen along the frontier.

Saying that repeated protests had been ignored by Bulgaria, the government ordered immediate suspension of a 1946 agreement that permitted militiamen of either country to escort trains across the frontier.

An official announcement said that ever since January 16 the government had been protesting a series of "most brutal violations of frontier traffic, irreconcilable with civilized behavior in relations between countries."

Appeals to Soviet

Announcement of the government's action came after the official Yugoslav Communist newspaper Borba appealed to Russia in a four-column editorial to call off the Communist Bureau of Information boycott of Marshal Tito or risk sabotaging the "international democratic peace front."

Borba warned Russia that the Cominform's increasingly hostile attitude toward Tito was "only the beginning of tragic consequences for the Soviet Union and world peace."

The article, which began as an attack on the Atlantic Pact, ended up by saying the Cominform "slanderers" of Yugoslavia strengthened and encouraged the creators of "aggressive blocs" to organize new conflicts.

Borbo reviewed all the usual Communist objections to the pact and then accused the Cominform countries of playing into the hands of the "imperialists" with their war of nerves against Yugoslavia.

Concentrations Reported

"Western propaganda recently began to spread reports of alleged caoncentrations of Russian troops around Yugoslavia and that the USSR was preparing to attack Yugoslavia," Borba said.

"In this way the Western press began to turn the eyes of the public opinion from the acts of its (imperialist) masters and to transfer it to the USSR in order to show that the USSR is a country that is seriously preparing to derange peace among peoples."

Borba noted that neither the USSR nor its allies had denied the reports of troop concentrations and said, "For example, when something similar was published by Tur key or Norway, it was quickly denied."

British Ease Film Ban

London, March 30 (U.P.).—The House of Commons tonight approved the Films Act bill reducing the percentage of domestic features which British cinemas must exhibit from 45 to 40.

Reds Planning Peril Is Seen

Rome, March 30 (NYHT).—A new "international front for peace" will be set up as an answer to the North Atlantic security alliance, directors of the Italian Communist Party disclosed today.

The new organization will establish close ties between supporters inside and outside the Soviet sphere, the Communists indicated. The front's first objective will be an impressive showing at the World Congress of Fighters for Peace in Paris, April 20 to 24.

Palmiro Togliatti, Italian Communist leader, announcing formation of the peace front, indicated he felt there is greater danger of an anti-Communist preventive war than there was six months ago.

Dutch to Open Peace Talks In Indonesia

Batavia, Java, March 30 (U.P.).—Representatives of the Netherlands government and the Republic of Indonesia will meet here next week in preliminary talks aimed at ending the three-year-old war in the East Indies, the Dutch announced today.

The Dutch said the talks will begin as soon as Dr. J. H. van Royen, head of the Netherlands delegation, arrives in Batavia.

The talks were ordered by the United Nations Security Council last week.

The Dutch-sponsored "Federal Government of Indonesia"—which the Republican leaders have boycotted—announced plans for the speedy establishment of a new Dutch-trained native army for Indonesia.

The new army, it said, would "supplement and replace" the present armed forces in Indonesia, mostly Dutch troops.

The U. N. Commission, in a report today on the March 18 attack on a U. N. convoy, placed the blame on Republican guerillas.

French Report Forces Mop Up In Indo-China

Paris, March 30 (U.P.).—French forces are mopping up in the Indo-China border town of Moncay, which was invaded by Chinese Communists Sunday, the French high command announced today, according to a French news agency (AFP) dispatch from Saigon.

The army communique said the Chinese Communists invaded Moncay with the aid of accomplices inside the city.

The army listed its losses as "about 30 killed and the same number wounded."

Moncay is a few miles from the border of the Chinese Province of Kwangtung.

The communique said the Communists were retreating around Loa Kay in the northwest. Other French army operations were under way near Haong Suphi, northeast of Lao Kai, and in the Langson sector near the Chinese border, the communique added.

Chiang Reported to Be Giving 'Full Support' to Peace Bid

Nanking, March 30 (AP).—Chiang Kai-shek gives "full support" to the Chinese government's bid for peace with the Communists, a well-informed source said today.

The assurances from the "retired" president were carried to the legislative Yuan (national legislature) as delegates prepared to leave for Peiping, where the peace conference with the Reds opens Friday.

Fighting flared as the conference neared. A military spokesman said the Communists had returned to the attack on Anking, on the Yangtze's north bank 150 miles southwest of Nanking. He said the position of Anking, capital of Anhwei Province, was "critical."

Canton press dispatches said rebels seized two towns in western Hunan, in China's rice bowl. Outbreaks were reported in Kweichow, Szechwan and Sikang, the three provinces surrounding Yunnan.

Greek Guerillas To Broaden Their 'Government'

Athens, Greece, March 30 (U.P.).—The Greek rebel "government" will be broadened to include political and military representatives from Bulgaria, Albania and Yugoslavia, the Greek guerilla radio announced today.

The broadcast said the new non-Greek members will be named from 600 delegates who attended the second congress of the "Macedonian Popular Liberation Front" which ended Monday.

Russians Chase, Arrest 3 Women in U. S. Berlin

Berlin, March 30 (AP).—Russian soldiers and Soviet zone police pursued three German women into the American sector of Berlin tonight, and carried them off.

United States public safety officers said the incident occurred in the Rudow suburb bordering the Soviet zone. Shots were fired during the chase.

Witnesses told police the women were carrying knapsacks, probably containing food smuggled from the Russian zone.

GIs' Czech Spy Conviction 'Gravely Concerns' Acheson

Secretary of State Acheson said yesterday the United States views with "grave concern" the secret conviction in Czechoslovakia of two American soldiers charged with spying.

Acheson said the American Government "fully supports" the action of Ambassador Joseph E. Jacobs, who filed a promp protest Tuesday in Prague against the manner in which the two soldiers were tried and sentenced.

In a formal statement, the Secretary said that before determining what further steps may be taken by the United States, the State Department will wait a formal statement by the Czechoslovak government, and the results of promised interviews with the prisoners by American officials.

The Communist-led Czechoslovak government announced yesterday that Recruit Clarence R. Hill, 31, has been sentenced to 12 years at hard labor and Recruit George H. Jones, 22, to 10 years. They had been held since December 10, when, U. S. officials said, they wandered across the border from the U. S. zone of Germany.

Acheson stated the two were convicted "without due regard for the normal rights and safeguards to which an accused should be entitled insofar as this Government is aware."

Jury Is Told Dennis Urged Allis Strike

New York, March 30 (AP).—The Communist conspiracy trial jury was told today that United States Communist leaders were responsible for a 1941 strike at the Milwaukee Allis-Chalmers plant and that its purpose was to shut off munitions for Great Britain.

Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the Communist Party and a defendant in the trial, urged the strike at a secret meeting of party officials in Milwaukee in the fall of 1940, a Government witness testified.

Dennis told the meeting, the witness said, that the party's politburo had "decided on the Allis-Chalmers strike to halt Roosevelt's war and hunger program."

Occasion Could Be Found

Harold Christoffel, then president of the Allis-Chalmers local of the CIO United Automobile Workers, told the meeting an occasion could be found for the stoppage, the witness testified. Christoffel was described in the testimony as a Communist.

The witness was Louis F. Budenz, first person to testify in the 11-week-old trial of 11 high U. S. Communist leaders. A former high Communist official, he quit the party in 1945.

Budenz said the strike urged by Dennis actually came off early in 1941 but was halted before Germany invaded Russia June 22 in that year.

The witness pointed out that Dennis' suggestion was made during the term of the Hitler-Stalin pact which was signed in 1939.

As the trial adjourned for the day, a slip of the tongue by Federal Judge Harold R. Medina caused a brief flurry in the court.

He said the indictments charged "conspiracy to overthrow" instead of "to teach and advocate the overthrow" of the United States Government. Four defense attorneys promptly made motions for a mistrial; they were promptly denied.

Describes Secret Session

Budenz told of attending the secret Milwaukee session in 1940. He gave this account of it:

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Meta Berger, whom the witness identified as the widow "of a former Socialist congressman from Milwaukee."

Among those present were Ned Sparks, "leader of the Communist Party in Milwaukee"; Christoffel; Fred Blair and Sigmund Eisenshur, Wisconsin representative for the Midwest Daily Record, a Communist paper.

Dennis took charge of the meeting and told the Wisconsin leaders to prepare to go underground "to turn the imperialistic war into a civil war" if the United States entered the war on Britain's side.

Pacific Chief

Adm. Ramsey, 40 Years in Navy, Retires

Retirement of Rear Admiral DeWitt Clinton Ramsey, commander of the Pacific Fleet and a veteran of naval aviation, was approved yesterday by President Truman, effective May 1.

Ramsey

Ramsey, who also is High Commissioner of the Pacific Islands trusteeship area, will retire after more than 40 years' service.

During World War II he commanded the aircraft carrier Saratoga when it joined the carrier Enterprise and Wasp in the first action against the Solomon Islands in August, 1942.

Ramsey was chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics from August, 1943, to June, 1945. In January, 1946, he became vice chief of Naval Operations, and two years later was named Pacific commander in chief.

Bill Pointed At Reds in Government

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

A bill designed to end Communist infiltration into the Government was introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Wood (D., Ga.) of the Un-American Activities Committee.

Wood's bill would apply to employes of defense contractors as well as those hired directly by the Government. It would establish penalties up to a $3000 fine, imprisonment for three years or both.

In the case of either type of employe, these acts would be illegal:

1. To join, remain a member or affiliate with the Communist Party or any organization designated subversive by the Attorney General.

2. To contribute funds to any of these organizations.

3. To advise any other officer or employe to do anything in violation of the first two provisions.

Chance to Get Out

The Wood bill makes it possible for anyone who is a member of or joins one of the proscribed organizations innocently, to escape its penalties by getting out within 31 days after the bill is enacted or after an organization is designated subversive.

The Attorney General would be required to make sure that all employes and officers affected have ample opportunity to learn what organizations have been blacklisted.

Similar in purpose to the Mundt-Nixon bill, which died in the Senate last year after passing the House, the Wood bill is broader, in that it covers defense contractors.

Another member of the Un-American Activities Committee, Representative Walter (D., Pa.) has introduced a bill which would make it possible to void the citizenship of members of the Communist Party.

Recovery Program Threatened by Two-Party Division

on the 10-per-cent Taft-Russell amendment will be touch-and-go.

If they lick this, the outlook was for swift passage of the bill, with only minor changes, including a possible compromise admonition to the Dutch on the Indonesian situation.

Senator Taft meanwhile took the floor in a full-dress appeal for the 10 per cent reduction as a token of congressional intention to cut all appropriations "down the line."

Taft told the Senate the only way to avoid a tax increase is to cut all expenditures without favor. Unless the Senate showed ECA was not "sacrosanct" by pruning that too "we won't be able to cut anything," he said.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) asked Taft why he didn't propose a 25 per cent cut "if his purpose is to save money."

Taft said he didn't want to "hamstring the Administration or embarrass the program." He said he thought ECA had been well administered and had accomplished much. But he said he thought any program could save 10 per cent without serious impairment.

Pepper said that in fighting "a disease in the body you must give enough of a drug or none at all."

Taft replied that ECA aid wasn't "like penicillin—the dose can be changed without injuring the patient if administered carefully."

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) meanwhile lined up for the cut along with Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.).

"I think it ought to be used as a standard for cutting other appropriations," Byrd told newsmen.

In other Senate speeches:

Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) urged adoption of his amendment calling for political union of Europe. He described it as the "cement" needed to hold Marshall Plan nations together.

Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) charged recipient nations 'are shipping everything from locomotives to jet engines to Russia and Russian satellites . . . largely produced with the raw material and money furnished . . . through ECA."

Nine Republican members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee meanwhile joined in a minority report accusing the Administration of "piecemeal" presentation of foreign-aid legislation and saying American policy in China "has collapsed."

On China, the report said:

"The utter bankruptcy, economic, military and moral of our Government's policy in China is not part of the bipartisan foreign policy. We will join in building a worthy and workable Chinese policy."

Two GOP members of the House committee, Representative Fulton (Pa.) and Javits (N. Y.), filed a separate minority report, voicing general agreement with the views of other colleagues but stressing two separate points on China:

1. That all democratic elements in the independent and non-Communist parts of China, not alone the Chinese Nationalist government, "deserve and indeed require our support."

2. Military aid, necessary as it may prove to be, should be only one element of our aid. Emphasis should be placed on economic reconstruction, honest and effective administration, and full utilization of resources for the welfare of the Chinese people.

Defense Funds Boost Sought

to the armed forces next year over the 1,616,000 proposed in the budget—34,688 more for the Army, 28,000 for the Navy-Marine Corps and the remainder for the Air Force. This would maintain the services at about their February 1, 1949, strength, instead of cutting back.

2. Authorize the purchase of 702 additional Air Force planes and 518 Navy planes next year. This would permit orders to be let for 3731 warplanes—2370 for the USAF and 1361 for the Navy—instead of 1668 Air Force and 843 Navy planes provided in the budget. Moneywise, it would give the Air Force $1,900,000,000 for aircraft orders—an increase of 435 millions—and the Navy $1,030,000,000—a boost of 343 millions.

3. Increase the number of Air Force groups from 48 to 57 and add 2 Navy carrier groups. At present there are 59 USAF groups in operation, which must be cut back to 48 by July 1, under the budget.

4. Operate two additional attack aircraft carriers, 30 more destroyers and 36 more minecraft and auxiliaries than provided under the budget.

5. Give the Army 84 million dollars more to buy 350 more "Skysweeper" antiaircraft guns. This is a new weapon which reportedly shoots only at enemy planes—probably by special electronics gear in American aircraft. Vinson said the budget takes the "risky" course of ordering 323 of these guns instead of the 673 asked by the Joint Chiefs.

6. Funds for th modernization of 743 Army tanks as proposed by the JCS, instead of the 250 allowed by the budget.

7. Provide training pay for 191,314 additional Army reservists than the 230,000 proposed by the Bureau of the Budget.

Vinson would allow the Army $254,600,000 more than proposed in the budget, the Navy 545 Millions more and the Air Force an increase of 800 millions. It would bring the defense budget to $16,364,600,000.

The Georgian is expected to lead a floor fight to obtain the additional funds if the House Appropriation Committee sticks to the Administration program. In contrast to Vinson's stand, Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio) has proposed cutting the defense budget by one billion dollars.

'Peace Rally' To Go on Road

New York, March 30 (U.P.).—A "world peace" rally will go on the road across the United States, its sponsors said today, but there will be no Russians in the cast.

Immigration officials gave 18 eastern European delegates "a week at the most" to leave the country.

The 18 came here with representatives of other nations last week for a "Conference on World Peace" in New York. The State Department now says the visas of the "iron curtain" delegates were good for the New York meeting only.

The National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions, today said the State Department's "go home" order will "convince more and more Americans that the department does not want and will not tolerate a truly free exchange of information between the American people and cultural leaders from the eastern European countries."

"We are reluctantly forced to conclude," the council's statement added, "that the Government must evidently be worried about any public forums where our foreign policy comes under scrutiny and discussion."

The council said it would carry out a series of "report meetings" in New Haven, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Detroit, St. Louis, Denver and Los Angeles.

AFL Pins Hopes On Dozen Senators

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Twelve "doubtful" Senators will determine the fate of the Administration's labor legislation in the Senate, some 200 AFL leaders were told here yesterday.

Such is the conservative opinion of the AFL legislative experts who have been following the course of the Thomas-Lesinski bill, backed by the major labor organizations of the country. The bill would repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and restore the Wagner Act with "improvements" suggested by President Truman.

Surveys of the vote situation in the Senate, the AFL key representatives were told, disclose that at the most, 46 Senators favor retention of the Taft-Hartley Act. The same conservative estimate counts 38 Senators for repeal.

Switches Expected

It was believed that 3 or more of the 46 pro-Taft-Hartley Senators can yet be persuaded to change their stand and that a majority of the Southern Democrats will vote for repeal.

George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the AFL, made it clear that any member of Congress who votes for retention of the Taft-Hartley Act must be considered to be an enemy of the AFL and the labor movement.

No AFL surveys on the labor legislation have been made in the House, where the Administration believes it has enough strength to overcome a Republican-Southern Democrat coalition.

The House is expected to take up the Truman-indorsed management-labor relations ahead of the Senate. For the past two days the House Rules Committee has been holding public hearings on a closed rule requested by Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.), chairman of the House Labor Committee.

Several Favor Open Rule

The request for a closed rule was made by Lesinski on a personal basis. Several members of the Democratic majority which voted out the Lesinski bill 13 to 10 told the Rules Committee yesterday they favored an open rule. The closed rule would bar amendments; an open rule would permit a "knockdown-dragout" fight over the measure on the floor of the House.

All the old pro and con arguments on the Taft-Hartley Act were rehashed yesterday before the Rules Committee. Republican and Southern Democrat members of the committee joined in conducting detailed questioning of the witnesses, who are members of the House Labor Committee.

The committee meets again today, at 1 p. m., for its third public session on the bill. Members of the Rules Committee confided yesterday that the public hearings would probably last through the week. After that, the committee will meet in executive session to work out procedure for voting on the Lesinski bill.

Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.) indicated for the second day yesterday he would seek a rule giving the House an opportunity to vote on the Lesisnki bill, and as the only alternative, on the Wood bill, which is a slightly modified form of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Fifth of Country's Idle on West Coast

San Francisco, March 30 (U.P.).—There were more than 700,000 unemployed—one-fifth of the Nation's total—in Oregon, Washington and California at the last count, a United Press survey showed today.

The unemployment rate in the three Pacific Coast States was double the rate for the Nation as a whole. And it does not include the "hidden underemployment" where employed persons work less than full time.

Experts predict that the seasonal rise in agricultural employment this spring probably will take up some of the slack but they do not know whether it will be sufficient to offset stagnation in the shipbuilding, maritime, railroad and metal trades industries.

The United Press surveyed Federal and State agencies and labor unions.

The California State Department of Employment estimated the unemployed at nearly 500,000. The CIO claims it is nearer 600,000.

Oregon's figure was a new postwar peak at 91,200.

Washington had 123,000 out of work.

The Federal Security Agency set the over-all figure at approximately 700,000.

Two causes of unemployment were cited by agencies and labor unions. They were:

1. The collapse of the tremendous wartime boom in heavy industries and related small shop plants.

2. Seasonal layoffs in lumbering, agriculture and food processing.

The FSA pointed out that at the wartime peak, the shipbuilding industry alone had a payroll of 527,965 workers. Today it has only 19,250 employed.

About 50,000 railroad men were out of jobs in five Western States because of the bitterest winter in history, a decline in agricultural shipments and new-type equipment which eliminates maintenance work, according to the Railroad Retirement Board, which pays unemployment claims in the industry.

A. T. Wynn, secretary of the Bay Cities Metal Trades Council, described the situation in the Metal Trades Council as "worse than any peacetime normal year."

Eddie Tangen, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards Union, also claimed the situation for maritime workers was "the worst since 1937." He said 50 per cent (about 2000 men) of the union members are idle.

Price Changes 'Healthy' Sign, 2 Experts Say

By The Associated Press

Two of the Administration's top-bracket financial experts agreed yesterday that current price adjustments are a "healthy" sign of continued prosperity if citizens don't get panicky.

But they differed, to a degree, over the danger of inflation that President Truman says must be forestalled with "standby" Federal controls.

The two men—Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder—expressed their views at separate news conferences.

This is the way Snyder put it:

"For the last three years it has been our aim and goal to halt inflation and adjust prices. Now, when we are approaching the outer fringes of accomplishing that goal, I see no need to get panicky, as some of our people are.

Stabilization Aid Seen

"I think we can be assured we're going to have continued prosperity. There have been some adjustments which I consider healthy and helpful. Each has caused us to stop, look and listen and has helped us to progress toward stabilization in an orderly fashion."

Nourse, who has just returned from a month's cross-country tour surveying economic conditions, said he found nothing on the trip to change his diagnosis that the price declines are a "healthy disinflation."

"I found no sense of panic," he said, "but rather a realistic facing of local problems in lumber, shipping and other industries."

Nourse talked with reporters after a half-hour conference with Mr. Truman, during which he said he gave the President a report on the State of the Nation's economic health.

He confirmed reports that he had submitted his resignation as chairman of the Economic Advisory Council a couple of months ago but said he plans to stay on the job "as far as I've heard."

Council at Odds

The three-man council is known to be at odds over Mr. Truman's anti-inflation program, with Nourse opposing the type of standby control powers the President repeatedly has asked of Congress. These wage, price and allocation powers have been backed strongly by Vice Chairman Leon Keyserling and John D. Clark, the other council members.

Nourse told reporters that despite recent price drops inflationary dangers still are "possibilities." He said they might become realities in case of a great increase in Federal spending, a big wage boost or a crop shortage. But he declined to say that the economic outlook calls for Federal controls.

A number of Congress members and industrialists hace spoken out repeatedly recently against any imposition of Federal controls, contending instead that present curbs should be relaxed more to stimulate business activity.

House Votes Funds for Interior, Defeats Reclamation Attacks

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The House yesterday passed the Interior Department appropriation bill without the bitter row over public versus private power promised by opponents of public power.

Time after time it beat down efforts to trim various Government power on reclamation projects. The final measure, passed by voice vote, provided 577 million dollars to run the department for the fiscal year beginning July 1—about 80 million dollars less than President Truman requested in his budget message. It was virtually unchanged from the Appropriations Committee report.

Representative Ben Jensen (R., Iowa), who had announced that he had wide support in a fight on the "Marxism and socialism" he said was apparent in the administration of some of the projects, made little effort to head off backers of the bill after an early defeat on some of the proposals.

The House showed itself definitely not interested in Jensen's opposition when it beat, 146 to 56, his proposal to cut $437,000 from the 29-million-dollar appropriation for Bonneville administration.

Another Jensen amendment which would prohibit Interior from transmitting power into a state without the permission of the Governor or public utility commission of that State, was ruled out of order.

5 Senators Offer New Health Plan

Five Senators yesterday offered a new "voluntary health insurance bill" based on Government subsidy of prepaid health insurance for those who can't afford their own.

Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), who introduced the measure to Congress, said no estimate of its cost could be made until the States, which would exercise control, could submit their plans.

It was immediately attacked by proponents of Administration plans for a payroll tax, national compulsory health bill as "either a fraud" or a measure which would cost the Government billions of dollars annually.

Cosponsors, making the bill a bipartisan measure, are Senators O'Conor (D., Md.), Withers (D., Ky.), Aiken (R., Vt.), and Morse (R., Oreg.).

Senator Hill, a cosponsor of the Hill-Burton Act which provides Federal matching funds for hospital and health center constructions, said his new bill was offered as a substitute for "the compulsory system" health plan being pushed by President Truman.

The "Voluntary Health Insurance Plan," like the Hill-Burton Act, would be financed through Federal funds and a variable percentage of funds provided from State and local sources, which gives a greater percentage of aid to low-income States.

Under the bill's provisions:

1. Persons unable to pay would get medical and hospital care insurance plan membership in nonprofit, prepaid health insurance programs.

2. They would be issued service cards entitling them to the same type and quality of hospital and medical services provided regular subscribers to health insurance plans without identifying them as recipients of Government assistance.

3. The State health insurance agency would reimburse the health insurance plan for the full cost of hospital and medical care provided under the plan, plus a reasonable administrative expense. The State may collect partial payments from those able to pay some but not all of their full subscription costs.

4. Enrolled subscribers who become unemployed would have the subscription charges carried by the State agency for the same period that unemployment compensation is paid.

5. Prepaid health insurance coverage would be broadened by providing for payroll deduction of subscription charges for employes of Federal, State and local governments who request it.

6. Diagnostic centers, clinics and other facilities in the States would be surveyed and a plan developed for providing additional needed diagnostic services.

7. Facilities for the treatment of mental, tuberculous and other chronic diseases would be surveyed and a plan developed for strengthening and improving the financing of such services where needed.

Would Encourage Physicians

8. Areas lacking adequate medical care would be surveyed and plans developed to encourage physicians to practice in these communities.

9. Existing enrollment in voluntary prepayment plans would be surveyed and methods developed for encouraging enrollment of all persons able to pay subscription charges, "particularly in the rural areas."

Attacking the new bill, Dr. Channing Frothingham, chairman of the Committee for the Nation's Health and twice president of the Massachusetts Medical Society, declared:

"The so-called 'health insurance bill' . . . is either a fraud on the American people or a proposal to appropriate billions of dollars out of the Treasury without any assurance that it will provide adequate medical care. It is impossible to decide which category the bill falls into because it is so vague in its terms."

Officials of the American Medical Association in Chicago declined comment on the measure "until a study of the bill can be made."

Outpatients' Evening Clinic To Be Set Up

The District Commissioners yesterday okayed establishment of an evening clinic for discharged Gallinger patients suffering from chronic internal maladies.

The clinic was approved experimentally, and only on condition that its personnel donate their services, according to Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, who has long campaigned for outpatient treatment in such cases.

It will be open three hours weekly, from 6 to 9 p. m. on Thursdays, at the Southwest Health Center, Delaware ave. and I st. sw. The clinic will be supervised by Dr. Joseph Fazekas, chief medical officer at Gallinger. It will open within a month.

Although service at present will be restricted to medically indigent former Gallinger patients, Dr. Ruhland said he hoped eventually for an appropriation to extend outpatient treatment to indigent chronic patients of "all hospitals with which the District has contractual relations."

Cancer Drive Opens Tonight

Stage, screen and radio performers will entertain tonight at Constitution Hall as a feature of the official District opening of the 1949 drive for cancer-fighting funds.

The expected audience of 4000, including volunteer workers from civic, fraternal and business groups, also will hear talks by Eric Johnston, chairman of the board of the American Cancer Society; Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, wartime commander of the WAC and national vice chairman of the 1949 campaign, and Dr. Leonard Scheele, Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service.

April has been designated as "Cancer Control Month" by presidential and congressional proclamation. The national goal is $14,500,000, with a minimum of $200,000 sought in the District.

Bank Manager Sought by FBI

RICHARD H. CROWE
He and $880,000 missing

New York, March 30 (AP).—A banker with a "reputation beyond reproach" was sought today in Florida in connection with the disappearance of $880,000 in cash and bonds from his bank.

The search centered in Florida, police said, after his wife received a letter postmarked from a Southern city. The FBI entered the case.

Richard H. Crowe, 41, assistant manager of the National City Bank branch at 195 Broadway, lived with his wife, Honore, and their three children in an 11-room house on the Staten Island shore. The family had two cars, and belonged to a country club. Crowe's bank salary was $6500 a year.

Missing was $590,000 in negotiable bonds, $100,000 in nonnegotiable bonds, and $190,000 in money.

He recently was in Homestead, Va., for a five days' rest, returning 10 days ago. He disappeared Sunday.

County Mental Clinic Cited in Funds Appeal

Success of a demonstration clinic in Prince Georges County, Md., was cited yesterday in an appeal to Congress for a broader national program in mental health.

A three-year, 65-million-dollar program was suggested to the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor and Federal Security by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

The NCMH said it is not "sound fiscal policy or defense policy" to appropriate 15 billions in one year for defense and refuse 65 millions over three years "to strengthen the mental and emotional stamina of those who one day have to man the army."

Pointing to the need for better mental hygiene facilities, the NCMH said the clinic set up in Prince Georges County had a waiting list within three months and still is not meeting the full need of the county.

Airlift Tops 8000 Tons

Berlin, March 30 (AP).—The Berlin airlift topped the 8000-ton mark today for the second time. American and British planes shuttled 8010 tons of food and supplies to the blockaded western sectors.

Forest Fire Burns Over 2000 Acres

Charles Town, W. Va., March 30 (AP).—A large forest fire was burning out of control today on the remote and rugged crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains south of here.

Meager reports coming from the 75 forest firefighters indicated as much as 2000 acres of timberland had been burned over.

No houses were in its path.

A heavy smoke cloud could be seen as far as Martinsburg, W. Va., some 25 miles north of the fire.

It apparently started sometime Monday in the narrow valley between the Shenandoah River and the western slope of the Blue Ridge.

Late yesterday it moved across the foothills and mounted the main ridge to the Virginia State line. The locale is about 10 miles southeast of here.

The fire apparently had cut a swath a mile wide from the base of the foothills to the top of the ridge, a distance of about 2 miles.

'Foundation Farthest Out' Defends Activities Before D. C. Zoning Board to Keep Quarters

Foundation Farthest Out, Inc., an institution interested in making every member of Congress realize he is "potentially a citizen of the world," yesterday pleaded for permission to continue operations at 535 Cedar st. nw.

The religious-educational group is housed in a three-story home donated by the late Mrs. Jessie Overholt. At a hearing yesterday before the District Board of Zoning Adjustment the organization was described as "a front for Un-American activities."

Neighbor Makes Charge

This charge was made by Abraham Chaifetz, attorney, who resides at 532 Cedar st. nw. He based his assertions on evidence that pacifist groups have mailed literature from that address and a rally supporting Henry A. Wallace's candidacy was held there.

J. H. Holmes, speaking for the Takoma Park Citizens' Association, said the group opposed the continuance of the organization in the house on Cedar st. on the grounds that it was "objectionable in a residential area."

Frank Olmstead, head of the foundation, said its name was derived from a magazine article which appeared several years ago urging persons to "search for the idea that's farthest out." State units and summer camps have been organized by the group and many persons stay at the Cedar st. home for a few days while visiting Congressmen, it was stated.

Such groups are augmented by Quakers, settlement house delegations, ethical culture affiliates, ministers and others interested in getting Congressmen to approach every-day problems on an altruistic plane.

The house is operated on a non-segregated basis and no charges are made for lodgings although contributions are welcomed, Olmstead explained. The Rev. Ward B. Hurlburt, pastor, Brookland Baptist Church, is chairman of the board of the local group.

The zoning board heard 28 other appeals, including one by the Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State for permission to establish a nonprofit organization at 1633 Massachusetts ave. nw. This request was unopposed.

All of the apeals were taken under advisement by the board, and decisions are expected today.

Segregation Case Dismissal Refused Taylor

Birmingham, Ala., March 30 (AP).—The groundwork was laid today for a high court test of Birmingham's laws requiring separation of Negroes and whites.

It came at the opening of U. S. Senator Glen Taylor's appeal from a police court conviction here last May 5.

The Idaho Senator, candidate for Vice President on the Henry Wallace ticket last November, was charged with disorderly conduct. He was fined $50 and given a suspended sentence of 180 days in jail in police court. He is appealing that conviction.

Arthur Shores, Birmingham Negro attorney, moved to dismiss the complaint against Taylor. The motion contended the laws providing segregation are unconstitutional. Taylor has said he would carry that argument to the highest courts.

Judge George Lewis Bailes overruled the motion to dismiss. He also declined to allow Taylor's attorneys to withdraw their original request for a trial by jury.

Twenty-five of a panel of 30 jurymen were qualified before the lunch recess.

Taylor was arrested May 1 when he attempted to enter a meeting of the Sonthern Negro Youth Congress through a door reserved for Negroes. The Birmingham laws require separate entrances.

Negroes and whites were segregated in the spectator seats at the trial.

'Group of Gentlemen' Sends Treasury $1700

A "group of gentlemen" tax delinquents are resting easier today.

They've squared themselves with the Treasury by contributing $1700 to its "conscience fund."

The Treasury said it had received an envelope, postmarked in Illinois, containing the money and an accompanying note, written in Spanish, explained that "a group of gentlemen" wished to pay off an income tax obligation.

Zoning Plan Approved At Hearing

The proposed master-zoning plan for Prince Georges County, after description by one of its authors as "by no means a perfect document," yesterday received general approval at a crowded public hearing in Upper Marlboro.

After the hearing, a three-man committee was named by the County Commissioners to begin conferences with the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which drew up the plan. Eventually, it will be resubmitted to the commissioners.

More than 125 county residents crowded the circuit courtroom yesterday to hear Robert M. Watkins, county member of the MNCPPC, outline the plan. While several persons took issue with individual provisions, none voiced disapproval of the over-all plan.

Outspoken in its favor were representatives of the County Civic Federation, League of Women Voters, several municipalities, women's clubs and other organizations.

The ordinance calls for establishment of 14 zoning classifications instead of five as at present. As a means of coping with housing problems, the plan sets up nine residential zones instead of three. It permits erection of semi-detached and triple-attached homes, currently prohibited.

Watkins, who admitted the ordinance is "by no means a perfect document," pledged his group's cooperation in conferences aimed at ironing out any wrinkles.

County Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh said one provision which allows one room to be used by not more than two boarders in a private dwelling was "too severe." Watkins agreed.

Virginia Road Funds Include 10 Jobs in Arlington, Fairfax

Ten highway projects in Arlington and Fairfax Counties are among 194 for the entire State approved in Richmond yesterday by the Virginia State Highway Commission.

Construction allocations, totaling $22,042,000 for the State, were announced by the commission for start on part of a new six-year program within the State's 20-year highway construction plan.

A total of $2,649,581 was allotted the Culpeper district which includes the northern Virginia areas near Washington.

The commission said the program will include strengthening and widening one-lane or weak bridges, surfacing primary highway links, eliminating accident-prone stretches of highways and bringing to adequate standards gaps in major routes.

Fairfax projects include: Route 236, West Shirley hwy.-Annandale, $112,000; Route 244, Annandale-Bailey's Cross Roads, $120,000; Route 50, Interchange at Fort Buffalo, $26,125; Route 123, Overpass and approaches to Southern Railway at Fairfax Station, $90,862, and Route 241, Pedestrian underpass, Southern and R. F. & P. Railroads at intersection with Route 236, $22,666.

In Arlington, the schedule includes: Route 50, Channelization at Park Drive, $12,000; Route 50, Interchange at Carlyn Springs Road, $12,000, and Route 124, Route 211 (Lee hwy.), Spout Run Drive, $60,000.

The bicounty projects are: Route 7, Reconstruction to four lanes of short gap between Alexandria City limits and Shirley highway, $60,000, and Route 7, Alexandria, west, $46,181.

Gas Company Head Jumps to His Death

told him on Tuesday, they said, that they intended to name him chairman of their board.

Mr. Sperry was next seen by Park Police at about 6:30 a. m., standing on the Connecticut ave. bridge. He disappeared before police could reach him.

Said He Was All Right

About an hour later, the police cruiser spotted Mr. Sperry on the Massachusetts ave. bridge. They questioned him, they said, but he told them he was "all right."

Shortly before 9:15 a. m., park police cruiser again spotted Mr. Sperry standing on the Massachusetts ave. bridge. They said he did not appear to be acting in a suspicious manner. At about 9:15, police said, Velmer Green, 44, of 1328 Lawrence st. ne., who was driving through Rock Creek parkway, said he saw Mr. Sperry climb the bridge rail, pause a moment, then leap from the span. He immediately notified police.

The body was found on the north side of the bridge, directly below the center of the span. Police said it was off the roadway in the dirt, on the part of the embankment between the creek and the roadway. Highway department officials estimated Mr. Sperry jumped about 75 feet. His glasses were not broken by the fall, homicide squad men said.

Identified by Permit

Mr. Sperry was dressed in a brown business suit. He was identified by a driver's permit in his billfold. Police said they found also in his pockets some change, a $1 bill, and some keys. He left no notes, police said. The body was formally identified by Samuel Hollingsworth, an attorney for the gas company.

Mr. Sperry was the son of Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry, USN, and a grandson of William L. Marcy, who served as Secretary of State under Franklin Pierce and Secretary of War James K. Polk.

Born in Annapolis, Md., on October 5, 1877 he was a student at the Pratt Institute from 1895 to 1896 and for the next four years attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He married Miss Anne Hunter in 1911. The couple had five children. Mrs. Sperry died in 1937.

Mr. Sperry began his career as a mechanic in a Philadelphia shop in 1900. He later worked as storekeeper, cashier for the Savannah General Electric Co. then as manager of the Ponce, Puerto Rico Electric Co. aand general superintendent of the Minneapolis General Electric Co. He then returned as manager of the Savannah Electric Co., a position he held from 1907 to 1913.

With Stone & Webster

From 1913 to 1931, he held a number of positions with the Stone & Webster Service Corp. in Boston. In the following year he served as vice president and general manager of the Fall River Gas Works Co.

In 1932, he became president of the Washington Gas Light Co. and its subsidiaries, a position he held until his death.

Everett J. Boothby, new president of the gas company, yesterday issued a formal statement expressing deep sorrow at Mr. Sperry's death.

"His death comes as a personal loss and grief to the hundreds of employes and associates in this organization, as well as his legion of friends in this city and throughout the country. We all have lost an honored friend," Boothby said.

Of Mr. Sperry, Boothby said, "He talked to and was friendly with those in low and high places; he never forgot the importance of man's place in our modern-day world. His many friends and philanthropic interests attested to his kindly and deep interest in his fellow men. He was completely unselfish and always concerned with the needs of others. And these traits were irdelibly reflected in his management of the affairs of our company."

Monument to Leadership

Boothby characterized Mr. Sperry's career with the firm as a "period of great success, and the present sound position of the company is a monument to his excellent leadership."

Alfred G. Neal, president of Potomac Electric Power Co., said "I am shocked beyond expression. Mr. Sperry's death is a great loss to the Washington Gas Light Co. and to this city and its civic agencies which he served so ably."

Edward D. Merrill, Capital Transit Co. president, called Mr. Sperry's death a "great blow to the community. He was highly respected by his colleagues in the utility field, all of whom held him in high esteem and affectionate regard."

James H. Flanagan, chairman of the District Public Utilities Commission, said the books of the utility firm were "in order." He said he was "very surprised" when informed of the death. "I just don't understand it," he declared.

Gas company officials said Mr. Sperry might have stepped aside as president last year. But they said he had his heart set on being at the helm during the utility's 100th anniversary year. He played an active role last year in preparing the booklet, "Growing With Washington," commemorating the company's centennial.

Mr. Sperry was a member of the Metropolitan, Alfalfa and Chevy Chase Clubs, and the Dupont Circle Citizens Association. He was an Episcopalian. He had been active in Community Chest work here.

He is survived by his second wife, nee Carol Van Antwerp Wilson. She was the widow of J. Harris Franklin when Mr. Sperry married her last June. Five children by his first wife also survive him. They are William H. Sperry, 1731 20th st. nw.; Marcy L. Sperry, jr., Walden, N. Y.; Mrs. William P. Fackner, Cliffside Park, N. J., and Misses Edith and Margaret Sperry, of 2445 15th st. nw.

Funeral services will be held Friday in St. John's Church here. Burial will be in Milton, Mass.

Movie Stars, Charities Get Part of Atwater Kent Fortune

Los Angeles, March 30 (AP).—A. Atwater Kent, retired radio manufacturer who died March 4 at the age of 75, left $1,335,000 to charities and educational institutions and two million dollars to his widow, Mabel Lucas Kent, from whom he had been separated for eight years.

The millionaire radio man, famed for the fabulous Hollywood parties he gave, bequeathed $442,000 to 73 friends, including the following:

Edgar Bergen, $3000; Billie Burke, $4000; Greer Garson, $10,000; Hedda Hopper, $10,000; Billie Dove Kenaston, $8000; Sir Charles Mendl, $4000; Lady Elsie DeWolf Mendl, $10,000; Richard Ney, $3000; Cornel Wilde, $4000; Claire Windsor, $10,000; Cobina Wright, $10,000; Gloria Morgan Vanderbile, $4000; Thelma Morgan Furness, $4000.

Attorneys estimated the Kent estate probably will exceed $4,400,000.

Gifts to institutions include:

Atwater Kent Museum, Philadelphia, $500,000; University of Pennsylvania Medical School, $250,000; Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, $250,000; Worcester Polytechnic Institute, $100,000; Tufts College, $50,000; University of Vermont, $50,000; University of California at Los Angeles, $50,000; Vermont Historical Society, $30,000; Southern California Symphony Society, $50,000.

Mrs. Kent also was bequeathed a life income from the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Co. Upon her death the income will go to their children, A. Atwater Kent, jr., Elizabeth Kent Van Alen and Virginia Kent Catherwood. Those married to the Kent children were given $30,000 each.

Faintheartedness

Promptness in countering false allegations from Moscow is of the utmost importance in keeping the record straight. For this reason the State Department is to be complimented for its action last week in anticipating the Soviet charges at the "International Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace" in New York that America is the barrier to Soviet-American understanding. The State Department release on American attempts to effect cultural and scientific exchange marshaled a wealth of evidence that the barrier, on the contrary, has been erected by the Soviet government. There have been, to be sure, notable exceptions. But in general and with increasing rigidity the Russians have ignored, hampered or rejected offers made by the United States Government and private organizations to exchange students, professors, books, scientists, artists, musicians, films, periodicals and the like.

While our record in this respect has been far superior to that of the Russians, it is now in great danger of becoming clouded. The refusal of visas to a number of non-official delegates to the New York conference seemed to indicate a new uncertainty. The announcement that a propagandizing junket around the United States is verboten to delegates from behind the iron curtain provides more evidence of trepidation. The poet says, "Let no soft fear lay hold of anyone," and the injunction is singularly applicable to present-day America. If we do not heed the poet we shall be doing the work of the enemies of our system as sappers and underminers of it. And, by the same token, we shall be flattering the Russians and therefore helping them with flattery's sincerest form, viz., imitation.

Perhaps the State Department is not so much at fault as Congress and the Justice Department in the drawing up and enforcement of the immigration laws; at any rate, the State Department's actions can hardly be reconciled with its release last week, a release which explains the Soviet attitude as follows: "feeling of inferiority, lack of confidence that Soviet ideas and ways of life would withstand competition with the capitalist world." Is the United States succumbing, with even less reason, to the same fears? Have we so little faith in our ideas and way of life that we need an iron curtain for their protection? Of course, the ideology spouted by these mouthpieces from Moscow is "dangerous" to our system, but it is even more dangerous if we dare not meet it in the open competition of ideas that is democracy's greatest strength.

Tax Dilemma

Senator George's warning that the Federal Government will have to reduce expenses or else face a deficit that will necessitate an increase in taxes was promptly seized upon by Senator Taft as an argument for cutting ECA appropriations and other appropriations. Later Mr. Taft said he intended to press for 10 per cent cuts on everything except fixed costs, interest on the debt and the military establishment, which, he concluded, could be cut about a billion dollars.

There is, as Senator Connally pointed out, no logic in arbitrary cuts of this sort. There should in each case be "concrete, specific and cogent justification for such a reduction." If this type of selective pruning of proposed outlays is followed, substantial savings might be effected and the deficit could be reduced. But efforts to avoid any tax increases by indiscriminate cutting of appropriations to the extent required to insure budget balancing would impair the efficiency of some governmental agencies, curtail the scope of the foreign aid program, and necessitate reductions in defense outlays. In short, there is no painless method of meeting the heavy projected costs of a budget that is loaded down with extraordinary outlays necessitated by the cold war in which the country is now involved.

The great advantage of Senator George's warning is that it forces his colleagues to face certain unpleasant facts that they otherwise might be disposed to ignore. Expenditures will probably be from 3 to 4 billion dollars higher in the next fiscal year than in the present one. Furthermore, with prices declining and business activity softening, the chances are that revenue yields will be smaller next year. So, barring drastic cuts in expenditures, the only alternative to deficit financing is an increase in taxes. That raises another knotty question for Congress to grapple with. The President's request for an additional four billion dollars of taxes was based in part on the argument that tax surpluses are needed to fight inflationary pressures. The changed business outlook has weakened, if not destroyed, the validity of that argument. Indeed, Senator George says that the one thing needed to bring on a sizable depression would be supplied by adding another 4 to 6 billion dollars to present heavy tax burdens.

If the present recession should gain momentum, increases in taxes (the bulk of which would doubtless be raised by corporate levies) might accelerate the downswing of business activity. On the other hand, a return to deficit financing might destroy confidence in the Government's financial stability and accentuate economic instability. The stage is accordingly set for a battle between legislators who believe that the only safe method of procedure is to balance budgets in good years and in bad and legislators who believe that deficit financing is not only justified but desirable when deflationary forces are in the ascendant.

Good For Johnson

By their deeds ye shall know them, and Louis Johnson, as his first act as the Nation's second Secretary of Defense, has struck his first blow for unification. Nobody recognizes more than we do that true unification is more of a human problem than a problem in organization. But we have never agreed with the complacent ones who sit back and contend that because of this, unification will not be accomplished till all ranks above that of colonel and its equivalent die off. There is such a thing as example at the top. And there is likewise such a thing as creating the environment in which men can work together in unison. Secretary Johnson intends to provide both this example and this environment, and in double-quick time. It was evident a week ago that he was bringing to his new post the enthusiasm of his pro-unification beliefs. Now, in full sight of the Nation, he has dedicated to the achievement of unification all the driving power of his dynamic energy and his leadership. Specifically he has announced that the headquarters of Army, Navy and Air Force shall be completely assembled in the Pentagon and then pruned into a smoothly running machine as the specific responsibility of Gen. Joseph T. McNarney.

The unified services that Secretary Johnson inherited were set up as a house of several mansions. It was what we called "quadruplification" when unification was enacted. Mr. Forrestal sat in an eyrie from which he had to throw out shoots of connection with the establishment in the form of temporary help and new bureaus lacking in requisite authority or a specific place in an integrated organization. The disconnection did not encourage unification; on the contrary, it made for lack of it. However, Secretary Johnson will not be able to do the job of creating a new chain of command made up of firmly connected links unless he gets the Unification Act amended. In new proposals to Congress, Secretary Johnson would have, inter alia, an Undersecretary who would be the nexus of the subordinate departments. This official would also take off the Secretary's back the burden of reading and signing the papers on which Secretary Forrestal had perforce to spend so much time.

This and other appointments in the new setup can be filled only by men of the highest caliber. Secretary Johnson knows that his success depends in large measure on the nature of his appointments. We are confident he will not cripple himself from the outset by attaching to himself and the department either party hacks or dunderheads. Security should know neither politics nor second-raters. A first-class team would leave Secretary Johnson free to deal with Congress, to act with the rest of the Cabinet in strengthening the arm of the President, and to inspire and work toward the real unification of strategy and organization of the armed forces which is more vital to the national security than all the paraphernalia of war we have piled up. Secretary Johnson already has both his impressive feet on the right track.

Fair Rents

The key to the workability of the new Rent Control Act is the "local option" provision empowering communities to remove rent ceilings with the assent of State Governors. If the opinion of Paul V. Betters, executive director of the United States Conference of Mayors, may be taken as a guide, no major city will act to remove ceilings and many would strengthen controls if they had the power. Under those circumstances the loophole in the new law will not make much difference, at least in urban areas where housing is tightest. But if Mr. Betters correctly expresses the views of mayors, the congressional action looks curiously like an effort to pass the political buck. Whatever the final result, "local option" will subject municipal governments to mountains of pressure, and it will put an unenviable burden on State Governors.

Essentially the "fair net operating income" allowed landlords by Senate-House conferees must be regarded as window dressing. This replaces the automatic 10 per cent rent increase called for by the Senate version and the "reasonable return on reasonable value" formula of the House. Conceivably the "fair net operating income" qualification will be easier to administer than the requirement for determining reasonable value, but the phrase is still vague and no yardstick is provided. Supposedly, local rent boards and the housing expediter have been attempting all along to grant fair operating incomes when rents have been up for adjustment. However, the provision is relatively harmless, and its inclusion may satisfy landlords that they will receive proper consideration.

Aside from these features the law is actually strengthened in other respects—though the practical effect of the strengthening will be determined by the staff allowed the housing expediter. The new law will enable the expediter to sue for triple damages on behalf of overcharged tenants, an important enforcement weapon now lacking. Further, it will end "voluntary" 15 per cent rent increases and will permit the housing expediter to make his own regulations covering evictions. Finally, it will empower the expediter to reimpose rent ceilings on areas he decontrols after March 31 if rents rise unduly. This is a sensible way of furthering the decontrol of areas where conditions warrant it during the transition from Federal regulation.

Chinese Dust

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, which is reported to be split three ways on what to do about China, might get some leading if not light from Anna Louise Strong's series of articles in the New York Herald Tribune on her jail experience in Moscow. Miss Strong's story has hysterical overtones. But the facts seem clear enough, and those who run may read that the Kremlin appears to be even more perplexed than the House Committee about China.

Miss Strong's heart is evidently with the Chinese Communists, and at first her request to leave Moscow and visit them seemed to get a favorable, even an enthusiastic, reception from the Foreign Office. Then there was hesitation. This grew under the insistence of Miss Strong into coldness and then outright hostility, especially when Miss Strong discovered that the officials had been evasive to the point of disingenuousness about the impossibility of crossing the Russo-Manchurian frontier.

Now it may be, of course, that Miss Strong, who is a somewhat overpowering person, became so much of a pest that the officials threw her into the Lubianka out of sheer self-protection. But we entertain another theory. The Russians just don't know what to think of and do about the Communists in China who have risen to power so rapidly and so decisively and with so little reliance on Mother Russia, and didn't want to risk letting Miss Strong add to the complication. Certainly the Russians are behaving strangely in China. They conformed to their treaty obligations with Chiang Kai-shek by giving him "moral" assistance to the extent of instructing their Ambassador and staff to go to Canton with the rump of Chiang's Nationalists—something that even this Government refused to do. And in Canton they seem to be trying to get in return material assistance in the form of concessions in Sinkiang. This story, which had already been reported, is repeated by Miss Strong. She says, also, that the Manchurian frontier had been closed in deference to Russia's treaty obligation to Chiang's government.

Another fact that deserves to be pondered is that the Soviet Union hasn't yet let off a single firework over the Communist victory in China. Why? Well, in 1927, when the Communists last triumphed in China, Muscovite fireworks turned out to be damp squibs; in other words, the victors in China turned Nationalist. It is well to remember that in her long history China has tried everything, and Titoism flourished there long before the flip-flop of the heretical Marshal Tito. The Russians seem to be obsessed with Titoism, and it would not be at all surprising if they are now more interested in exporting trouble than in exporting communism. The House in all the circumstances is well advised by the State Department to let all this dust settle.

Atomic Salaries

In its proposed revision of top governmental salaries, the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee has committed a major error of evaluation with respect to the Atomic Energy Commission. The salary bill as amended places the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission in a sort of third salary bracket at $18,000, along with such other officials as the executive assistant administrator of veterans' affairs. Other members of the commission are ranked even lower in the governmental echelon at $16,000. Meanwhile, Cabinet officers would be raised to $25,000 and some 25 other officials to $20,000.

There has been evidence in the past of an organized effort to demean Chairman David E. Lilienthal and to hound him out of the Government. Happily there has been a surcease of such bludgeoning lately. We prefer to believe that the present instance is an error of judgment rather than a deliberate attempt to subordinate the Atomic Energy Commission. In any case, it ought to be corrected promptly on the Senate floor.

The McMahon Act establishing the Atomic Energy Commission purposely set the salary of the chairman at $17,500—above that of Cabinet members. Other commissioners were given $15,000, the same as received by the Cabinet. This reflected a measure of the importance placed on the caliber of men appointed to deal with this vital new force. Surely the proponents of the praiseworthy drive to increase the pay of governmental policy-makers cannot have intended what amounts to a demotion for the custodians of the world's potentially largest business.

YOUNG NUN

In the train of virgin
Dignified and slow,
Tapping on my high heels
I tentatively go.

Frightened and conspicuous,
But singing none the less,
I try to pass unnoticed
In my red dress.

Alas, I cannot trade it
For a stately gown
So I bravely wear it
Through the wondering town.

And in my heart I'm hoping
When He and I shall meet,
He may forgive a poppy
For growing in the wheat.

"China's Friends"

I am profoundly shocked by your March 24 editorial, "China's Friends." When The Washington Post sinks to the level of a plain smear in attempting to support its traditionally "liberal" approach, and calls "hopeless" the fight of those who genuinely wish to prevent a Communist Eastern Hemisphere, I am almost sick at heart.

It is unnecessary to spell out the consequence of complete Communist control in the Far East. Not only China, but Indo-China, Burma, Malaya and the East Indies are already troubled with the first signs of Communist infection. Lies, deceit, treachery, spoliation, noncooperation, murder, pillage are in the same familiar pattern. How long can a free nation such as ours continue to have basic security without prohibitive military expenditures, in a world one-half of which is proposed to be supinely donated to this same communism?

If Senator McCarran's attempts to protect our interests in the Far East and to put the lie to the theory that coalition with Communists can work for peace, is a "senseless intervention"—if, as The Post states, the cause of the truest friend the United States has had in China is a "hopeless fight"—if, as The Post implies, the poor, unfortunate people in China would be left alone (which means left to Communist control), then the wholly negative conclusion is that the United States should get out of China, get out of the Far East and let the whole Eastern, Oriental world go by default to the hammer and sickle.

It is not too late to help hold the Yangtze line. It is never too late to put our shoulders to the cause of freedom and the protection of our own security.

We have had some experience with Manchuria—the Ruhr of China—before. From 1931 until Japan marched, this same Manchuria we permitted to work for Japan. Today it and its vast industrial capacity works for Russia. Perhaps this time, if we continue to sleep, it may be less than seven years.

It is not a question of being a "friend" to China. What is involved here is a common-sense protection of this country. We will not be safe if all of the Oriental millions become vassals of the Kremlin.

"A Sorry Setting"

In your editorial of March 26, "A Sorry Setting," the writer was greatly impressed with the lack of an auditorium for the Capital for any public functions, to say nothing of the lack of a place for the signing of the North Atlantic pact.

The Washington Post and other papers in this city should get behind a real movement to revive the building of a memorial stadium, and an up-to-date auditorium, together with a large museum. It should be suitable for Olympic games, and all sports events. It will show the world what a great country we have and it would be the best advertisement from a peace standpoint regardless of how much money is spent to make this possible.

CVA Opposition

I have been informed that a lengthy article in The Washington Post for March 13 written by Tom Humphrey of the Portland (Oreg.) Journal, cites me as among others "strongly opposed" to a Columbia Valley Authority. This statement is not a fact. I have not made this statement to Mr. Humphrey or anyone else.

Belasco Plays

It is interesting to notice the number of people that are jumping on the bandwagon of the Belasco Theater project.

Because of my own interest in drama, growing out of my study in a dramatic school, I would thrill at seeing a dozen legitimate theaters in the Nation's Capital. However, I would like to point out that it is not the building that will keep the people coming to see plays, but the plays themselves. Should the Belasco open for stage productions, I sincerely hope that those producing plays there will not sit back and merely open and close the curtain but try to have what happens between the curtains be theater.

The Belasco, and any other structure, will close just as fast as the theaters in New York City have been closing in the past two decades, if the plays become sociological, ideological, philosophical, and what have you. The fate of "living theater" in Washington, D. C., or anywhere else, rests in the play, and not in four walls.

WILLIAM H. STANNARD

Ban On Segregation

I saw in the March 18 edition of your paper, that Representative Arthur G. Klein introduced a bill to eliminate segregation in the District public schools and other public services. That is the kind of bill to make democracy.

Neighborhoods have been, and are rapidly changing now. In my neighborhood, white and colored children live side by side, and play together evenings, Saturdays and Sundays. But on Monday mornings, the colored children have to trudge six or seven blocks, crossing several dangerous intersections, while the white children just cross the street to the school, one block away.

The children of today are asking why they cannot go to school together since they play together. The condition is without answer, since young people do not have racial prejudice until it is instilled into them. How can we develop "responsible and participating citizens" as long as this method of education exists?

MRS. L. M. LOGAN.

Sforza's Visit

It is most regrettable that there should be any possible association between the North Atlantic Treaty and the imperialistic designs of the signatories. This association, is nonetheless dramatically revealed by the arrival of Count Sforza, the Italian Foreign Minister, in the United States and the openly avowed intention of discussion with the State Department of an Italian trusteeship over the former Italian colonies in Africa.

Apparently, the "liberal" Italian Foreign Secretary came a week before the signing of the treaty in order to have ample time to discuss the subject.

An Italian trusteeship over even Italian Somaliland, the policy which the United States is reported as having already approved, is absolutely indefensible in view of the well-documented record of Italian atrocities in Ethiopia.

"Two Germanys"

Your March 26 editorial, "Two Germanys," has all the good qualities which have made of me, as of so many others among your readers, an ardent admirer of The Washington Post. It is serious, frank and goes to the core of the problem. And yet, I think, the policy it recommends is not realistic and would, if carried out, be harmful for this country and for the world.

No one who, like the writer of this letter has spent almost 50 years in Germany and found refuge in this country from Nazi persecution, can be blind to the danger of a reviving chauvinism and militarism which might be kindled by the restoration of a unified German state. But anyone who knows what is going on in the hearts and minds of Germans of all classes and groupings knows also that nothing will stir up these hateful sentiments so vigorously as foreign dictation directed against German unity.

German unity has been the German dream for centuries. It is the German tragedy that it did not come the democratic way, in spite of all the heroic attempts in 1848, but was handed down to the people by the autocratic genius of Bismarck.

But whatever the weaknesses were of its specific form, German unification was in line with the fundamental trends of western civilization. It was the answer to the needs of an industrial age which were and are as powerful in Germany as they are in this country. If we bank upon the particularism of the German states—as your editorial proposes—we will have allies only among the reactionary forces in Germany. You find evidence of that in what is going on in Bavaria today.

What is the answer then to the German dilemma? Should our policy be directed upon the restoration of a centralized west German state, even if this state is dominated by aggressive, nationalistic, crypto-militaristic forces, the same forces which destroyed the Weimar Republic? Certainly not!

There is another alternative, and it is indicated in your editorial. We should support the forces in west Germany which give the best prospect of being not nationalistic, not militaristic, not aggressive, outstanding among them, to quote from your editorial, "the non-Communist labor movement as the most cooperative, dependable and peaceable segment of the German people."

We should do it, and I think we can do it, in the hope that these groups have learned from whatever errors they committed in Weimar times. We should support them not only with friendly words but by assigning to them a decisive voice in shaping the new Germany. This means, indeed, a turn in our German policy.

A unified west German state in the control of these forces—centralized only so far as necessary for the well-being of its citizens and of Europe—will be no danger for the world. We will find in the same peaceful forces our best allies for our policy of European unification. This policy will be discredited if we line it up with the dusty ideals of particularism.

International Nagging

By Malvina Lindsay

In-Law Countries

NOTHING SO much resembles a big family reunion with fault-finding in-laws assembled as the present world-wide nagging by nationals at each other.

A French chef turns up his nose at American pineapple and cheese salad, and angry housewives here berate French sauces and morals. An American visitor to the National Gallery of Art says the Michelangelo statue of David is "too little," and an Italian who overhears seethes visibly with rage.

British visitors shudder at American tea balls and undisciplined children, and Americans in England denounce the "drab, soggy" food and antiquated bathrooms. An American girl struts in shorts on the streets of Paris, Tokyo or Mexico City, and natives join in outraged social disapproval. A group of Americans who have had too much to drink get noisy in public in a foreign capital, and the United States is called a nation of drunkards. A French visitor laughs at American book clubs, and indignant American women remind him of the picture postcards sold in Paris to tourists.

Myths that each nation cherishes about other nations are rehashed both by those who make two-week surveys of foreign countries, and by those who never leave home. Magazines abound with articles about what Europeans, Asiatics and South Americans think of the people of the United States, and vice versa. News dispatches record the latest insults concerning cooking or social customs that nations hurl at each other.

ALL OF THIS was inevitable. Nations are now going through what may be the touchiest stage of their association in a newly contracted world. They are rubbing elbows as never before, yet they are not yet well enough acquainted to understand each other's customs and viewpoints.

"It is remarkable," wrote Milton Bracker recently in the New York Times Magazine, "how exasperated an American can become over the fact that in Argentina it is nearly impossible to get dinner before 9 p. m., or to have coffee served before the dessert dishes have disappeared."

In the United States, visitors from Europe, Asia, South America, likewise get annoyed about little things. And official business and the exchange-of-persons programs are bringing an unprecedented number of visitors here. More foreign students than ever before—26,759 at latest reports—are here. More of our young people will be going abroad for study under the Fulbright scholarships.

Europe expects to entertain 350,000 American tourists this year, 50,000 more than in 1948. By 1952 it expects 500,000 American tourists annually.

SOME CYNICS declare this human mobility will heighten international friction. Nationals, like family in-laws, especially get their hackles up over traditions of cooking and social behavior and pride of background. Yet these hurdles of misunderstanding between nations have to be taken some time, the world being what it is.

Americans have the hardest role in this adjustment because of the jealousy and resentment nationals of weaker countries feel toward them. They also have a great responsibility to win the international good will their Nation needs. Among frequent criticisms of them is their disregard of foreign social customs, particularly in the street dress of women, and also their indifference to foreign languages.

A briefing in behavior for tourists going abroad has been suggested by the international travel bureau of the American Automobile Association. For, as Jerry Ryan, director, points out, even though the ill-behaved tourist is as infrequent as the one rotten apple in a barrel, yet the Nation is judged on his behavior.

However, this social adjustment calls for international action as well. The effort should not all be on one side. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is working for this on a long-range basis. But some immediate concrete measures are needed, if nothing more than the issue on a mass scale of international primers of etiquette for all those leaving national boundaries. Broadcasts and lectures would help as part of a general campaign of information. For though adults can be made well-bred, sensitive and considerate overnight, yet they can be given a veneer of propriety that might prevent increase of the human ill will with which the world is now overburdened.

Church Relief

The Episcopal and other Protestant churches are carrying out a program of foreign relief work similar to that of the Roman Catholic church referred to in Mary T. Tachimczyk's letter of March 28. Their united appeals is for 10 million dollars.

Non-Romans who may wish to contribute to world relief and thereby do their part in the development of an international goodwill that is vitally necessary to the peace of the world may make such gift through the Protestant church of their choice or, if unaffiliated, through the Washington Federation of Churches.

A Communication

Public Policy And The Science Foundation

By The Science Legislation Study Group, Washington Association of Scientists

NOT SINCE the Atomic Energy Act of 1946 has there arisen scientific legislation as important as the proposed National Science Act of 1949. Hearings on eight bills are scheduled by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on March 31, April 1 and 4.

Actually there are only three different bills, represented by H. R. 12, H. R. 359 and S. 247. They are the bills of the Seventy-ninth and Eightieth Congresses, without change. H. R. 359 is the same as the compromise bill reported to the Senate of the Seventy-ninth Congress. S. 247, recently passed by the Senate, and H. R. 12 are the Senate and House versions of almost identical bills introduced into the Eightieth Congress. They are slight modifications of the vetoed National Science Foundation Act of 1947 and are designed to meet the President's main objection.

AS RECOMMENDED by the Hoover Commission and the Steelman Report, the chief purposes of the National Science Foundation are:

1. To examine continuously the total scientific effort of the Nation.
2. To recommend a national science policy based on these surveys.
3. To assess the proper role of the Federal Government in this effort and to coordinate Government research programs.
4. To support basic research and education in the sciences.

None of the bills encompasses this entire scope. Without it, the National Science Foundation is in danger of becoming merely another fund-disbursing agency.

THE MAIN difference between the bills of the Seventy-ninth and Eightieth Congresses is in the form of administration. In H. R. 359 the foundation is headed by a full-time administrator assisted by a part-time advisory board. In H. R. 12 and S. 247, the foundation is headed by a group of 24 part-time members, assisted by a full-time director acting as chief executive officer.

Although they provide for presidential appointment of the director, the two bills still contain the serious defects mentioned by the President in his veto, in that they would "vest the determination of vital national policies, the expenditure of large public funds, and the administration of important governmental functions in a group of individuals who would be essentially private citizens. The proposed National Science Foundation would be divorced from control by the people to an extent that implies a distinct lack of faith in the democratic process. . . .

"The qualifications prescribed in the bill for members of the foundation would insure that most of them would be individuals employed by institutions or organizations eligible for grants . . . Moreover the organization prescribed in the bill is so complex and unwieldy that there is grave danger that it would impede rather than promote the Government's effort to encourage scientific research."

Since the part-time foundation members would determine science policy and approve disbursement of public funds, without responsibility to any elected governmental authority, they would actually be in a position to nullify the integration of the foundation into the governmental structure.

IN RESPECT to top administration, H. R. 359 is greatly superior to the other bills. It prescribes, however, a detailed suborganization that may limit the effectiveness of the foundation. These details should be left to the discretion of the administrator. This principle should apply to the establishment of all divisions and special commissions.

Other differences in the bills of the Seventy-ninth and Eightieth Congresses involve provisions for the distribution of funds, patent rights, research in the field of atomic energy, military research and foreign policy.

H. R. 359 requires that part of the funds for research be distributed on a population and geographic basis, and that fellowships and scholarships be apportioned on a quota system among the States. The other bills instruct the foundation "to avoid undue concentration of such research and education" but do not assure scientific development of the areas of the Nation which are scientifically underdeveloped—one of the chief purposes of the foundation.

R. R. 359 requires that patent rights on Government-financed discoveries be freely assigned to the public. This provision, however, extends to all Government agencies, whereas it should be limited to the foundation. In H. R. 12 and S. 247 no policy is specified other than to "protect the public interest and the equities of the individual." This leaves the foundation to decide its patent policy and hence open to patent litigation which could seriously hinder its work.

H. R. 12 and S. 247 limit the support of research by the foundation in the field of atomic energy. If any limitations are necessary, they should relate only to work on fissionable materials, in order to be in accord with the Atomic Energy Act of 1946.

All of the bills provide for support of military research by the foundation. Since other legislation has provided for such research, it should be the general policy of the foundation not to give continuing support to research requiring security classification, but to have such research performed in Government laboratories, or sponsored by the appropriate military agency.

ALL OF the bills provide for international cooperation in furthering scientific activity. H. R. 12 and S. 247, however, couple this cooperation with the foreign policy of the United States. The search for objective knowledge should not be cast along national lines, as has been done by totalitarian states. International scientific cooperation should be effected through established international agencies such as UNESCO and other accredited international scientific organizations.

The need for a National Science Foundation remains urgent. We cannot delay longer without grave consequences to our national scientific position. In basic science and in training of scientific talent the war years were lost years. By providing the structure for a National Science Foundation in which the purposes are correctly implemented the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the Eighty-first Congress can make one of the most important contributions to our future national life.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Half A Loaf

ON THE ancient principle that half a loaf is better than none, the White House is inclined to accept gratefully the rent-control bill finally agreed to by Congress. The belief is that it can be administered in such a way that the majority of tenants in the big cities will be protected while at the same time small landlords will have their wrongs righted.

Childs

This calls for something like the judgment of Solomon. Officials immediately responsible for the administration of rent control are not so optimistic.

One reason the White House is willing to accept a renewal law which will mean some rent increases is the extraordinary volume of mail from individuals setting forth facts to show they have suffered real injustice. Elderly couples and widows who have put their whole savings into one or two rental properties could show in dollars and cents the squeeze they have been under.

A letter from a widow in New Jersey is typical. She has a little insurance money and one rental property as her only source of income. "When rent control went into effect," she writes, "I was paying $48 in taxes and $10 for a ton of coal and my paint bill that year was $187."

In 1948 the same paint job cost $310. Taxes were $90 and coal cost $17.50 a ton. While all expenses zoomed upward, rent stayed the same. Such genuine hardship cases, as manifested in thousands of letters, have a lot to do with the White House attitude. But so, too, does the new determination to get along with Congress that is now a major White House motivation. From here on out that will be a primary consideration in almost every decision.

SENATOR John Sparkman of Alabama and Representative Brent Spence of Kentucky are given full marks by the White House for shaping a bill not too unpalatable. The highly controversial provision for "reasonable return on reasonable value" was replaced in the measure that came out of the Senate-House conference in favor of "fair net operating income." The last, it is believed, will not be nearly so difficult to administer.

The fact has been duly noted at the White House that the two noisiest opponents of the bill in its final form were Senator John Bricker of Ohio and Senator Harry Cain of Washington, both Republicans. Bricker and Cain are considered to be the frankest spokesmen for the real estate lobby.

Under the decontrol provisions the pattern of rent control seems almost certain to undergo a radical change along geographical lines. Southern members of Congress insisted on decontrol on a "States' rights" basis. Local communities can take off control with the approval of the Governor of the State.

IN THE South, and especially the small-town, rural South, rent control is fairly certain to be abolished. There is no very articulate demand for continued controls in that region. Many tenants south of Mason and Dixon's line do not have a vote.

The contrast in the industrial North is sharp. With serious overcrowding still the rule, no mayor or Governor is likely to advocate decontrol. It would be a gesture of political suicide.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in New York has shown clearly which way the wind blows in the North. He issued a strong statement saying he would refuse to approve removal of Federal controls anywhere in New York State "except upon the clearest proof that controls are neither necessary nor desirable."

Perhaps the South can make an honest case that controls are not nearly so necessary there. With the exception of a few areas, the wartime increase in population was much less in the South than in the Northeast and the West.

But while this may be true, the fact of control in the industrial North and no control in the South will set up still another barrier of difference between the regions. One immediate effect should give Southerners some pause. Sizable rent increases are likely to bring new wage demands. The tendency will be to pare down that significant advantage the South always has counted on to attract industry—a lower cost of living.

Acheson On The Big Time

DEAN ACHESON is about to meet his first test as Secretary of State representing this country on the very highest level of international negotiation. Ernest Bevin and Robert Schuman are officially coming to Washington for the formal unveiling of the Atlantic Pact. But while the British and French Foreign Ministers are here, Acheson will also try to get agreement on the German problem. This will be his first test, and, it must be added, none could be more difficult.

During the last year, while nobody worried and everybody squabbled, the German problem has been allowed to become shockingly acute. Britain, France and the United States agreed at London over 12 months ago to create a west German government and to merge their zones of German occupation. Since then, however, nothing has been done to carry out the London agreement, or to find some other way to liquidate the increasingly pernicious system of direct military government of Germany.

Within Germany, the political effects of this Allied aimlessness are already grave. They will shortly become disastrous if the dissension continues. Acheson has got to achieve some sort of practical solution. Yet he has almost all the cards stacked against him in the effort now ahead of him.

To begin at the beginning, the American policy-makers were far from agreed, until the last hair's-breadth moment, just what the German solution ought to be. Mr. Acheson himself had not followed German policy closely before he took office. He was influenced by the barrage of propaganda against Gen. Lucius D. Clay. And he was even inclined to regard the whole plan of a west German government as a sort of brass-hat fantasy. The State Department planning staff was also having a period of acute doubt on this crucial point. There was actually a moment when the project we fought for so hard at London was in danger of being abandoned.

Just to complicate matters further, the State Department policy-makers had their eyes fixed on the relatively starry problem of integrating Germany of the future into an organized Europe of the future. But the policy-makers of the Defense Department were more preoccupied with the dusty details of German administration. They wanted to be sure, for instance, that the French would not be able to sabotage the whole new design for Germany by running their zone in disregard of the paper agreement.

To cap the climax, the new German section of the State Department, headed by Ambassador Robert Murphy, was just in process of being set up. For weeks, therefore, there was a positive maelstrom of drafts and counter-drafts, conferences, informal discussions and special studies. From all this, with his usual clear-headedness, Acheson now seems to have won through to the heart of the matter. He will not go into the meeting as completely briefed as he might be, but he has a lawyer's talent for absorbing a problem quickly. And he will at least have a fully agreed policy paper in his pocket.

THE FINISHING touches were given to this paper when State Department Planner George Kennan returned from studying the situation on the spot, in Berlin. The aims are now, very briefly, to set up the west German government and merge the three western zones, as agreed at London; and, further, to provide that this new western Germany may later become an integral part of a united Europe. The American program at least is sensible.

But Bevin and Schuman must approve the American program. For his part, it was only on the ocean that Foreign Secretary Bevin promised to stay over in Washington long enough to discuss Germany more than casually. He is not as yet accompanied by the technical experts without whom the British never really reach major decisions.

As for Foreign Minister Schuman, he is certainly the most sensible of all French leaders on the German problem. His hand has been greatly strengthened by the recent French elections, with their resounding Centrist victory. This victory will also nullify the most persuasive of all the French arguments against practical measures in Germany, which has always been the rather ghoulish chant, "De Gaulle (or the Communists) will get us if you don't watch out." The fact that Schuman wants action is attested by his intention to stay here much longer than Bevin. Yet getting the French to carry out the London agreement in earnst will still be worse than pulling teeth.

To complete the list of complications, the experts think the Soviets are getting ready to terminate the Berlin blockade. But if this is correct, the Kremlin will probably try to use the end of the blockade to bring on another four-power conference, thus again deferring final decisions on west Germany. Altogether, Acheson has a thorny road ahead of him. But at least, in this tall, severe-mannered man, the country has a negotiator who can be counted on to fall into no booby traps and to overlook no means of reaching his goal.

Bland, 77, Not to Seek New Term in Congress

Representative S. Otis Bland, dean of the Virginia delegation in Congress, announced yesterday he will not seek reelection next year. The First District Democratic Representative gave his age — 77 years — as the reason prompting him to end the service he started 31 years ago.

5 Twisters Strike, Kill 3 in Oklahoma

Canton, Okla., March 30 (AP).—Tornadoes hit five times in northwest Oklahoma before dawn today, killed three persons, injured a score and did property damage which may amount to a million dollars.

The death toll rose to three this afternoon when Mrs. C. W. Godfrey, about 80, died of injuries.

Her home was in Canton, a town of 1200, and the first one struck.

Twisters also struck Longdale, 400; Blackwell, 12,000 and two rural areas—one near Enid and another near Medford.

Twelve-year-old Larry Arnold was killed in Longdale. Charles Stowers, 32, died in Canton.

Foot of Snow In Nebraska

Omaha, March 30 (AP).—Mud vied with snow today for top billing in a bizarre spring weather show in Nebraska.

A snowstorm, reminiscent of the succession of blizzards that plagued Nebraskans during the winter, dumped 12 inches and more of soggy flakes on central Nebraska.

And in northeast Nebraska, roads became so muddy that some towns were isolated in a sea of mire.

At Bloomfield, a town of 1800, roads were so bad that not even tractors or horse-drawn wagons could travel them without great difficulty. An expectant mother was brought in to Bloomfield by lumber wagon. The 3-mile trip took three hours.

Schools were closed at Broken Bow, North Platte, Hershey, Sutherland and Cozad in central Nebraska. Some roads also were snowblocked.

PEOPLE KNOW

ON SIGHT BY ITS

YELLOW COLOR

LET'S KEEP IT THAT WAY!

Every effort should be made to maintain sound protection of the foods that go to the family table. This great nation was not built upon misrepresentation and imitation. It has grown great as the result of fair competition among products sold to the public for exactly what they are.

Today an effort is being made to confuse the situation by allowing another product to assume the golden yellow color that has become recognized as BUTTER'S trademark color. This would lead to confusion. It would encourage misrepresentation. It would be contrary to the public's best interest. ONLY BUTTER CAN BE BUTTER and no action should be taken that would permit misrepresentation through imitation. Through the years BUTTER has been made from GOLDEN CREAM—four pints to every pound . . .

AMERICA HAS ALWAYS BEEN A BUTTER COUNTRY!

BUTTER has been the nation's standard of good living. Let's keep it that way. No one likes to be fooled. Misrepresentation should not be allowed to happen to BUTTER through imitation of BUTTER'S yellow color. The public doesn't want it to happen. You don't want it to happen. That's why the dairy farmers of the nation make this proposal to free the public from oleomargarine taxes while at the same time protecting the public from fraud:

1. Remove all taxes and license fees on oleomargarine paid by the public and the food industry.
2. Prohibit the use of yellow color in the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine in imitation of BUTTER.

The Granger-Andresen Bill, now before Congress, removes all oleo taxes. It prohibits the movement of yellow oleo in imitation of butter in interstate commerce. It permits each state to regulate within its borders. To that extent it gives you the protection you have a right to expect when you buy butter. You would pay no tax. Fraud would be prevented. This is a fair proposal in the public interest—your interest. You could get a choice between yellow butter and products not colored in imitation of butter.

ONLY BUTTER CAN BE BUTTER

Congress Extends District Rent Control Law for 30 Days

thanges in the existing District rent law.

The score: the House conference members receded on four Senate amendments. The Senate conferees accepted one House language change and they deadlocked on the sixth, and most important, future rent-increase formula.

On the resolved points of difference, the District rent bill will differ from the existing law in these respects:

1. The criminal penalties provision will be eliminated. Civil proceedings will remain in force.

This Senate amendment was accepted by House conferees.

2. Conferees substituted the House-passed cooperative sale clause for the Senate's national language. It provides that tenants of cooperatively owned apartments will be protected from eviction if less than 65 per cent of present occupants were cooperative stockholders on or before March 1, 1949. The national bill does not require that the 65 per cent be present occupants of the apartment up for sale. The present District law has no cooperative sale clause.

3. The Senate passed amendment decontrolling transient accommodations of hotels with less than 50 rooms was accepted. The existing local law holds controls on transient rooms in these small hotels.

4. House conferees receded to the Senate conversion provision which states that future converted housing will be decontrolled only after "finding of fact" by the rent administrator that the conversions resulted in "self-contained family units." Under present local law all conversions for additional housing are automatically decontrolled.

5. Conferees accepted the Senate amendment stipulating that no rental housing shall be recontrolled which heretofore had been decontrolled. Present law carries no such "catch-all" clause.

Members of the conference committee are: Senators McGrath, McCarthy and J. Allen Frear, jr. (D., Del.), and for the House, Representatives Oren Harris (D., Ark.), Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) and Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.)

Truman Signs Rent Measure

tates the making of adjustments necessary to correct injustices against landlords. In particular, the act will be helpful in the case of small landlords who may not be obtaining an adequate net operating income."

The President singled out eight special features of the new law for comment.

1. The authority of the housing expediter to regulate evictions, which he did not have in the law expiring tonight. The President said this provision will make it possible to curb the black market.

2. Right of the housing expediter to sue for treble damages. Mr. Truman called this "another powerful weapon to curb the black market in over-ceiling rents."

3 Authority of the housing expediter to recontrol areas he may hereafter decontrol.

4. Authority for the housing expediter to pass on decontrolling of units created by conversions.

5. Recontrol of trailers and trailer space used for permanent residence, and recontrol of permanent hotel accommodations in New York and Chicago.

6. Elimination of the so-called voluntary 15 per cent leases.

7. Restoration of subpena powers to the Housing Expediter.

8. Requirement that landlords receiving rent adjustments certify that they are maintaining and will continue to maintain all services furnished on the date determining the maximum rent.

President Truman even gave his approval to the "home rule" provisions of the new law permitting States, and cities, towns and villages, with the approval of State Governors, to decontrol.

"I urge local authorities in reaching their decisions to examine all the facts carefully and to exercise their best judgment in the interest of all the citizens in their communities," President Truman said.

District of Columbia Code which cover horse race betting and the "numbers" lottery, as well as other more obscure forms of gambling."

Fay told the property owners "This office proposes to prosecute any and all persons who have violated the gaming statutes in such premises, all persons who have aided or assisted in such violations, and all persons having control of such premises who have knowingly permitted such violations therein."

The United States attorney also released samples of the 300 letters he had written to the telephone company, requesting the removal of 324 telephones on the premises of gambling suspects. A sample of the letter he had written Western Union requesting removal of 26 teleprinters, one located in Virginia and the remainder in Maryland, was also released.

The letters said that instruments at a given address were being used in violation of gambling laws, and requested that the telephone or Western Union instruments be disconnected and further service discontinued.

Mistake on One Phone

In the case of Decatur 8036, one of the telephones ordered removed by Fay, however, the district attorney seems to have made a mistake.

The attorney for the estate of William H. Taft Boldware, in whose name the telephone is listed in the present directory, informed Fay by letter today that Mr. Boldware died on April 29, 1948.

Boldware, known in gambling circles as "Sunshine," was killed when his Lincoln coupe crashed into a streetcar at 1st st. and Florida ave. ne. He was known as a wealthy numbers operator, with headquarters at 902 Florida ave. nw.

State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie of Prince Georges County, will meet with Fay at 1:30 p. m. today at the latter's office to discuss the raids.

Bowie returned from a trip Tuesday to learn of the raiding parties in his territory. Unable to contact Fay that day, he reached him yesterday and made the appointment.

1¼ Million Teachers Seen Needed by '59

Philadelphia, March 30 (AP). Help wanted: American educators are looking for a miracle maker.

If you know how to find 1,250,000 additional elementary and high school teachers; if you know how to build 450,000 additional classroom units, all within the next 10 years, education has a job for you.

Leading educators reported these needs today during the final session of the American Association of School Administrators regional conference.

The spokesmen were:

Dr. Mabel Studebaker, president of the National Education Association; Jean Wilson, president of the National League of Teachers Associations; Dr. Edgar L. Morphet, chief of school finance section, United States Office of Education, and Dr. Alfred D. Simpson, professor of education at Harvard and vice president of the AASA.

They declared that more than 9 million new pupils within 10 years will swell the total in elementary and high schools to 34 million.

The educators say this threatens America with a "grave crisis." The public, they urged, "must be made aware of the need for more funds."

The elementary schools will need 1 million additional teachers and the high schools 250,000 in the next 10 years. While the high school situation is "under control," conditions in the elementary schools are "serious." At the present rate we are training teachers, there will be a 500,000-teacher shortage.

Dr. Studebaker said "Communities everywhere must embark on recruitment programs stressing the attractive features of the profession to young people."

Montgomery School Finance Group Named

A committee to air the proposed five million dollar school construction program for next year before Montgomery County citizens was announced yesterday.

The Joint Committee on School Finance was formed at the request of the county council to find out if Montgomery County taxpayers are willing to pay added taxes for school construction. It would mean tax increase of 14 cents per $100.

The committee, headed by Nathan Gilbert, president of the Montgomery County Parent-Teacher Associations, is expected to form a speakers bureau to discuss the school construction program before various clubs and civic groups.

The committee program will be discussed at a meeting at 7:30 p. m. Monday in the home of Mrs. Jay Rene Hemingway, 301 Baltimore ave., Takoma Park.

Members of the committee as announced yesterday by Gilbert include Mrs. Hemingway, representing the League of Women Voters; John T. Moore, Montgomery County Civic Federation; Floyd M. Carver, Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring; Mrs. L. O. Regeimbal, American Association of University Women; Robert B. Parke, Parents' League for Curriculum Improvement; James D. King, Montgomery County Farm Bureau, and Mrs. David H. Stowe, Council of P-TA's.

Riverdale to Hold Election May 2; Four Announce

Town elections in Riverdale, Md. will be held May 2, it was announced yesterday, with Mayor Harry A. L. Barker had three incumbent councilmen seeking re-election.

J. Power Waters, town clerk, reported that the election will be held from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. May 2 at the Municipal Building, 48th and Queensbury rd. Registration dates, he said, are April 19 and 26, with polls open from 8 to 10 a.m. and 4 to 7 p.m.

Incumbent councilmen who have announced their candidacy are Hanson D. Powers, fifth ward; Stafford M. Howard, sixth ward, and Harry C. Showers, third ward.

Illegitimate Child Held No Relation to Father

Bristol, England, March 30 (AP).—The County Court ruled today that as far as the law is concerned an illegitimate child in England is not its father's child, but the child only of its mother.

The ruling came in a case under the rents law in which a landlord was trying to dispossess a man, a woman and their illegitimate child.

The question was: Did they constitute a "family" under the Rents Act?

No the court ruled, and they will have to give up the premises.

"The meaning of the word 'family'," said the verdict, "is vased on marriage. This illegitimate child is not the father's child. It is only the child of its mother."

Truman Attends Fete of Press Club

President Truman attended the forty-first anniversary reception of the National Press Club at the club last night, and made a brief off-the-record talk.

Mr. Truman, a member of the club, presented engraved card cases to former presidents of the club. They included William C. Murphy, president in 1934, now publicity director for the Republican National Committee.

Other former presidents who received card cases were Oswald S. Schuete, who headed the club in 1913; Frank B. Lord, 1914-15; Grafton S. Wilcox, 1917; Earl Godwin, 1919; Carter Field, 1923; Louis Ludlow, 1927; Norman W. Baxter, 1930; Mark Foote, 1935; George W. Stimpson, 1936; Charles O. Gridley, 1937; Harold Brayman, 1938; Arthur Hachten, 1939; Felix Cotten, 1943; Sam O'Neal, 1944; Edward Jamieson, 1945; Paul Wooton, 1946; Warren Francis, 1947, and Joseph Hudson Short, 1948.

John Cornelius O'Brien, correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer and current president of the Press Club, presided at the ceremonies.

St. Louis Monsignor Is Appointed Bishop

Pope Pius XII has appointed the very Rev. Msgr. Charles H. Helmsing of St. Louis as Titular Bishop of Axomis and auxiliary to Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis.

The announcement was made by Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States. Bishop-elect Helmsing has been secretary to the Archbishop of St. Louis since February, 1946.

Vera Bloom Due at Book Luncheon

Vera Bloom, daughter of the late Representative Sol Bloom and author of last year's best-seller, "There's No Place Like Washington," will be one of the four guest speakers at The Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon on April 6.

Vera Bloom

Miss Bloom's new book, "The Entertaining Lady", is being published by Putnam for release in Washington on the day of the luncheon.

The book is "an informal guide to good living," and discusses such features of entertaining as making a success of any kind of party and how to be an excellent conversationalist.

The luncheon will be held in the Presidential Room of the Hotel Statler next Wednesday at 1 p. m. Tickets, at $3 each, may be purchased at the book departments of Kann's and Woodward & Lothrop, and at these book stores: Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Better Mouse Trap, Chequire House, Community, Francis Scott Key, David Pearlman's, Paul Pearlman's, Pursell's, Savile's, and Whyte's.

Milk Decision Today

The Virginia State Milk Commission last night postponed until today a decision on requests of three dairies serving northern Virginia that milk prices be cut.

The commission was to have met last night in Norfolk but postponed the meeting until 10:30 a. m. today.

ington reported last August 14 that anonymous letters had accused Bissel of "unauthorized transactions" while he was stationed in London. A preliminary study failed to establish the validity of the accusations, it said, but Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington ordered a further inquiry.

Bissell, who served in World War II as commander of the United States Tenth Air Force in the India-Burma-China theater and later as Chief of Army Intelligence arrived in Wiesbaden, Germany, yesterday faor the investigation.

"I have no comment on the Air Force announcement," he said. "The fact that there is an investigation has been previously published. The investigation is continuing. That is the situation."

Hughes said the investigation was based on a letter signed only "Embassy Employe," accusing Bissell of selling 1200 pounds of coffee illegally in Germany.

The attorney said Bissell had sold coffee only in the legal barter market.

In these barter markets, Americans could trade in coffee, cigarettes and other items scarce in Germany. They would receive barter points with which they could obtain jewelry and other valuables turned in by Germans. The markets were closed last year after being flooded with cigarettes.

Hughes said the United States Justice Department once advised the Air Force the evidence did not justify prosecution.

(The Justice Department in Washington said the Bissell case is "under consideration" by its criminal division. Alexander M. Campbell, chief of the criminal division, said no decision has been reached as to whether the facts are sufficient to warrant any action in civil courts.)

Bissell, now 52, was an ace in World War I.

He was graduated in law by Valparaiso University in 1917. His home is in Kane, Pa.

General Bissell served first in Washington in June, 1920, as Chief of the Tactical Operations Section, Office Chief of Air Service. In December, 1920, he went to Langley Field, Va., first at the air school, later as instructor and flight commander, until 1921. He returned to Washington and was in and out of the city a number of times until he completed his assignment in 1924.

He returned to Langley Field, from where he went to Fort Leavenworth, the Army War College here, and Edgewood Arsenal, Md.

In 1937, General Bissell became commander of Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. In 1938 he returned to the United States and later became a member of the War Plans Division of the War Department General Staff. In 1942 commanded the air forces in India.

In 1943 Bissell returned to the United States as assistant chief of air staff for intelligence. In 1944 he became chief of the Army's military intelligence division.

TRADE IT FOR CASH THROUGH THE POST

THIS YEAR make spring housecleaning pay! Your attic, basement or storage closet will probably yield a rich loot in articles that some Post reader would be happy to buy. Gather together those salable items, list them in a Post classified ad and watch how quickly they'll turn into cash.

Here are only a few of the things now selling fast through The Post's "Miscellaneous For Sale" column: Baby cribs, carriages, playpens and strollers . . . beds and bedroom suites . . . bicycles . . . bookcases . . . clothing of all kinds . . . dining room furniture . . . electric ironers, sewing machines, vacuum cleaners and washers . . . golf clubs . . . lamps . . . living room pieces . . . pianos . . . radios . . . refrigerators . . . rugs . . . toys . . . and typewriters.

How many items on that list can you find among your surplus? Probably several—and this spring is the time to dispose of them. Remember, your own telephone is a Post want ad station. To place your notice just call NAtional 4200 and ask for an ad writer.

One on the Aisle—

'Set-Up' Shows Up Fight 'Fans'

By Richard L. Coe

"THE SET-UP," at Keith's, tells a simple story of the fight racket realistically and well.

The central figure, ably acted by Robert Ryan, is a victim of middle age—old age for a fighter—and his reluctance to admit he's a failure is the fundamental theme of the story. The picture is brief, less than 80 minutes, but into it has been poured details of the ring and its fans that don't often get such complete attention.

Although the theme of a middle-aged failure is the sort of thing to capture the imagination of the senstive, and the detailed shots of the boxing fans suggest more than they depict, "The Set-Up" is not for the queasy or gentle-hearted. It pictures the fight racket as a cheap thrill for pathetic characters inside and outside the ring. Its story is by no means so detailed as John Garfield's recent "Body and Soul," nor so sure-fire as Mickey Rooney's "Killer McCoy."

The story (told in close to the time the events occur) finds 35-year-old Ryan pretty near the bottom of the boxing heap. His manager and second agree, for a price, to throw the fight, but they hold out this news from him so's to keep his cut. Ryan's wife (Audrey Totter) wants him to give up the struggle and, for the first time since they've been married, refuses to watch her husband take the punishment that's usually his.

But tonight is different. Ryan feels he's going to win the four-rounder and, in one heck of a battle, he does. But the gangster-backer of his opponent has him beat up for not living up to that set-up, of which Ryan knew nothing. As the film closes, he's fought his last fight and his wife feels she, too, has won the evening's battle.

Considering the complex stories most fight pictures present, this is startling simplicity for a movie yarn. For one, I welcome it, since it concentrates on the fight, the hangers-on and the general tone of the lower depths of the boxing world.

Fistic Lowlife

Director Robert Wise, for instance, has thrown some of the blame of fistic lowlife on the people who pay their way in. He shows you a blind man who keeps screaming, in brutal vengeance, for "Tiger" Nelson to give it to Ryan in the eyes. You see a housewife letting savagery pour from her lips, shouting to whoever's down to get up and be killed. He gives you that familiar slob of fight nights—the obese pig who eats faster and faster as the tension mounts in the ring. He suggests, by these means, that however brutal the racket's hold on boxing may become, it's little different from the lugs who scream for blood.

The dressing room scenes are good, too; you might call the assortment of boxers types, but they seem real enough through the kindly, dulled eyes of Ryan. An amateur boxer in his college days, Ryan is well equal to the grueling ring scenes, and never let it be said Ryan didn't earn his salary this year. What a punishment that guy takes.

This seems to be the year for rough treatment of the fight racket by the movies. The release date of "The Set-Up" was moved up by RKO in an effort to get ahead of Screen Plays, Inc.'s "Champion." RKO has sued the latter company, claiming that Screen Plays' "Champion" (from a Ring Lardner story) uses the same set-up, in which a fighter refuses to throw a bout, that is the basis for Keith's current film.

NINA FOCH has joined the group of entertainers for tonight's American Cancer Society kickoff program in Constitution Hall; Art Brown will organize the singing. Dr. Robert Howe Harmond will lead the Washington Male Chorus.

THE MARET SCHOOL isn't one to be left behind by Catholic University's speech and drama department . . . Tomorrow afternoon the students will present Shaw's "Arms and the Man," currently holding the C. U. stage . . . John Buchan's "Vision at the Inn" also will be presented by the Maret scholars in Pierce Hall, 15th and Harvard sts., at 2 p. m. Mrs. Frank Verweibe is directing both casts, which include Parvin Davallou, Catherine Sullivan Evelyn Howdershell, Yanna Kroyt, Peggy Davis, Cathleen Kline, Anne Ramser, Mirga Zadelkis, Helen Roushakes, Barbara Jones, Virginia Briggs, Kathryn Ann Barker and Nancy Ball.

LUCIAN SCOTT will present his costumed "monoplays" under sponsorship of the Armstrong P-TA at Armstrong High tomorrow night at 8:30.

"THE SET-UP." RKO release produced by Richard Goldstone. Screen play by Art Cohn from the poem by Joseph Moncure March. Directed by Robert Wise. At Keith's.

Beer Truck Drivers Authorize Strike Call

New York, March 30 (AP).—CIO beer truck drivers and brewery workers have authorized their union leaders to call a strike Friday against 14 major breweries here in a contract dispute.

The CIO International Brewery Workers said the men had voted, 4497 to 478, to empower their union's joint executive board to call the strike if negotiations fail. The board said a strike would affect 7000 workers.

Officer Drops Charge, Absolving Driver

Norman J. Tavan, 21, of 2700 Allison st., Mount Rainier, Md., was cleared yesterday of charges of assault with a deadly weapon and disorderly conduct.

The charges had been brought by Washington Terminal policeman Clarence R. Burke, who said that on March 1, when he sought to question Tavan for an alleged minor traffic infraction, the latter drove off, his car dragging Burke. Municipal Court was told that Burke declined to press prosecution.

NEW YORK—Judge Michael Angelo Musmanno of Pittsburgh, who was a Navy Department observer at the Nuernburg trials and then became a judge there, was in New York this week, and tells of his visiting the Nuernburg cell of Grand Admiral Donitz. This was on the day Goering committed suicide. As a check against the possibility of further suicides, all the other cells had been stripped of contents, and even the prisoners' clothing removed . . . Musmanno found Donitz naked, except for a blanket around him. "Dignity, eh?" the grand admiral greeted him. "Is this the way you treat an enemy?" . . . "Well, I'll say this much," Musmanno conceded, "This is not the way I would treat a friend."

Musmanno asked Rudolf Hess about his flight to Scotland, and Hess boasted that he had parachuted within 13 feet of the target he had set for himself when he left Germany. "Did the Feuhrer know you intended to make the flight?" Musmanno asked him. Hess said: "I told no one of my plans; no one—but the Feuhrer knows everything."

After Albert Speer, the Nazi munitions minister, was sentenced to 20 years Musmanno questioned him about his reactions. "I'm glad," Speer said. Musmanno asked: "Glad? Twenty years away from your children—your country in ruins—and you're glad?" Speer said: "What's 20 years in the history of man. . . . Mine was the trained brain. I was wrong in doing what I did. And this is a lesson to all trained brains that they can't hide behind the sovereignty which gave them their power. Perhaps if there had been such trials after the last war, this one never would have happened."

John G. Broady, the lawyer for Clendenin Ryan involved in the wire-tapping story, once worked for Winston Churchill.

Delegates Favor 'Jim Crow' Repeal

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, March 30. — The Maryland House of Delegates voted tentatively today to wipe out Maryland's 45-year-old "Jim Crow" segregation law.

The roll-call vote was 59-48 to reject an unfavorable committee report on a bill calling for its repeal and for preliminary approval to repeal the bill itself.

The repeal measure is expected to come up for final action possibly Thursday or Friday.

Similar bills have been introduced in every session of the General Assembly for the past 20 years. The Senate has traditionally approved them, but the House has always administered the death blow.

The Senate has already cleared the bill this year.

The motion to override the unfavorable Judiciary Committee report was made by the committee chairman, Bernard S. Melnicove (D., Baltimore).

"This piece of legislation has been on the books far too long," Melnicove declared. "It is undesirable and is a blight on the good name of the Free State of Maryland which has always been in the forefront of the fight for freedom and tolerance."

A motion to second was made by Delegate Dewitt S. Hyde (R., Montgomery) who said he spoke "on behalf of the Republican Party which has fought hard and long" for Jim Crow's repeal.

"Demagogues have used the subject to exploit voters of minority groups and to discredit this Nation in the eyes of the world," Hyde declared.

"Laws such as this are a definite handicap to us in the battle of ideologies now going on."

It actually has been enforced only on Chesapeake ferries, and Delegate Albert L. Sklar (D., Baltimore) pointed out that when the new bay bridge now under construction is completed no place in the State would be affected.

There were no speeches against the repeal. The "aye" votes came mostly from Republicans, a scattering of Baltimore City delegates, and representatives of Western Shore counties. Almost solid opposition came from Eastern Shore delegates.

Montgomery Again Fails In Bond Fight

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 30.—A fight to give the Montgomery County Council some option in underwriting bonds issued by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission failed again in the General Assembly tonight.

At present, both Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties are required by law to guarantee all bonds issued by the commission.

An earlier fight against the mandatory provision by Montgomery delegates in the House failed last week. It was renewed tonight by Senator Roy Tasco Davis (R., Montgomery) in the upper chamber.

Despite strong efforts of the Republican minority in the Senate to push a Davis amendment through which would give Montgomery some choice in whether it underwrites the commission's bonds, it failed by a 16-12 vote.

Millionaire Named Dad of Actress' Son

New York, March 30 (U.P.).—A South American millionaire today was named the father of a 5-month-old son borne by his former fiancee, Mira Stefan, a 26-year-old movie actress.

A three-judge special sessions court ordered Pastor Paul Buenaventura to pay $25 a week to support of the child, Michael, until he is 16 years old. The award was retroactive to the date of the child's birth, October 19, 1948, and will total $20,800 over the 16 years.

Buenaventura said he would appeal.

"I always thought men were decent until I ran up against this," Miss Stefan said bitterly. "Now I'm going steady with my baby."

Adoption Ruled Out for Negro GIs' Babies

Heidelburg, Germany, March 30 (U.P.).—German welfare authorities disclosed today there is no legal machinery by which families in America can adopt the 134 illegitimate children of American Negro soldiers here and in nearby Mannheim.

Only an orphanage can offer sanctuary to these children.

Lieut. Col. Marcus Ray of Chicago, adviser to Gen. Lucius D. Clay on Negro affairs, said he did not have the power to turn these children over to American would-be foster parents and that "the only one to decide this problem is General Clay."

The 134 babies born of American Negro fathers in this United States Army headquarters city are only a small percentage of the 5000 illegitimate children born to German mothers in Heidelburg and Mannheim since the war.

Local officials said only about one-fourth of the mothers of children with Negro fathers are willing to keep their babies. The rest either have not made up their minds or want to get rid of them.

Paper Is Made Of Straw by New Process

Memphis, Tenn., March 30 (AP).—Scientists disclosed tonight that they have started making superior grade paper from straw and grass, and have produced trees that grow bigger and faster.

These developments were reported to the national farm chemurgic council.

E. R. Timlowski, a chemist, said the new method for making paper, including newsprint, means that 90 per cent of all the paper this country uses can be made from straw and grasses now wasted.

American newspaper publishers will see results from new plants in this country within a year, he said.

Victor Shoffelmayer, director of the Southwest Research Center at San Antonio, said the new fast-growing hybrid trees will permit the United States to grow all the lumber it needs—no imports necessary.

The new paper for use in newspapers is superior to the present wood pulp paper and can be produced at less cost.

Shoffelmayer said the fast-growing trees are produced by cross-breeding two or more tree varieties. They grow two to three times as fast as those we have now, he said.

Jury Disagrees In Morals Case Against Priest

Gallatin, Mo., March 30 (AP).—A Circuit Court jury was discharged tonight after failing to reach a verdict on a morals charge against the Rev. Patrick J. Sloan, 70-year-old Catholic priest.

Judge V. C. Rose dismissed the all-male jury when the members said they were hopelessly divided, 7 to 5. The judge instructed them not to say whether the majority was for acquittal or conviction.

The complaining witness, 16-year-old Kenneth Creekmore, Bethany, testified yesterday that he was molested on several occasions as he was driving a car for the priest.

Father Sloan said today he merely was teaching Creekmore and other boys to drive the car.

Defense attorneys contended the charges were brought because the people of Bethany were trying to get rid of the clergyman.

The State contended the priest started his work for underprivileged boys as a cloak for immoral activities.

The priest is being tried on the first of four charges of contributing to the delinquency of minors. He also is charged with sodomy involving a 15-year-old boy.

Nats Do Fine for 5 Innings, Then Lose to Phils, 7-4

My Story . . . By Joe Louis

'Buddy Baer Was the Only Fighter Ever Cut Me'

(12th of 15 Installments)

IN 1939 I beat John Henry Lewis. John Henry was my friend. I didn't want that fight. He was a good boxer, but when he come against me he was finished. It was only that his manager and the sportswriters forced it on me. They wrote and built it up that I wouldn't fight another Negro. I knocked him out in the first round. Three months later I beat Jack Roper in Los Angeles, and then I beat Tony Galento in four rounds in New York.

I got a second fight with Bob Pastor in Detroit in September 1939. Blackburn said to make him carry the fight to me this time, and I did. He got in some good punches and Chappie didn't like it. When it got to the tenth and Pastor was still in there, Chappie gave me sharp talk. I knocked Pastor out in the eleventh. That's the way Chappie was at a fight.

We'd talk things over, I'd say, "I think I can reach this man with a right hand now," and he'd say, "I think so too"; or I'd say, "I think I'll try a feint," and he'd say, "Okay." Whatever Chappie told me, it always came out right.

My toughest fight was my first Bily Conn fight, and it was the first time I had a real argument with Chappie. Sportswriters came down from Billy's camp and told me he would be fast because he was figuring to come in the ring at around 175 pounds. When I heard that, I got my weight down to 199 by drying out two days before the fight. I didn't drink anything.

Chappie said it would leave me weak. He wanted me to weigh 202 to 203 in the ring. I was stubborn. He was right and I was wrong. In the ring my strength went fast. When Billy was still in there with me in the twelfth Chappie and Mannie Seamon said, "You got to knock this guy out. You're losing on points." In the thirteenth I put a hard right over and he went out. I almost lost the title that night. I never argued with Chappie again.

There were lots of fights I didn't feel too good. In my first fight with Arturo Godoy in New York on February 9, 1940, I really dogged it.

I DIDN'T feel peppy, Godoy had a funny crouch and he was hard to hit, but that wasn't all that was wrong. I had no heart for fighting that night. That's why he stayed 15 rounds. I asked Mr. Roxborough right after that fight to get Godoy for me again. On June 20 that year I took six rounds to open him up and knocked him out in the eighth. I had to do that to square myself for my bad fight with him.

After the Conn and Godoy fights I wanted to lay up a while, but Mike Jacobs wanted me to fight Lou Nova and I said I would. I knocked him out in six rounds in September 1941. In my fight in Washington in May with Buddy Baer that year he put me over the ropes in the first round. He could hit. I knocked him down three times in the sixth.

HE claimed my last punch came after the bell. His manager wouldn't leave the ring when they rang for the seventh. That disqualified him and they gave me the fight. That Buddy Baer was the only fighter ever cut me. He opened my left eye with a right that night. No other fighter marked me like that, not even Max Schmeling.

I fought Buddy Baer again in January 1942 in Madison Square Garden. The money was for Navy Relief. Chappie Blackburn was real sick then. His heart was giving out on him. When we went out to the ring I told him, "You won't have to climb these steps but once tonight, Chappie. I'll make this one short." Mr. Wendell Willkie made a speech about me risking my title for my country and the people cheered. I knocked Baer out in the first round. Chappie didn't have to climb those steps no second time that night.

I WAS registered for the draft with Chicago Local Board 8 in 1940. I tried to get the registration transferred to New York, but they wouldn't have it that way. Mr. Walter White of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People—he's a good friend—and Mrs. Roosevelt talked a lot about using me in the Army for morale. There was some talk I could have a commission. It came up then and a couple of times later, but I didn't want it. I didn't want anything special. I just wanted to be a GI. I went out on a boxing exhibition tour for the Army.

I MADE six or seven Army camps and boxed for the boys. Three days after the second Buddy Baer fight I volunteered for Army service and they took me. I went out to Camp Upton on Long Island with a lot of reporters and photographers. I didn't like that. I wanted to go in quiet, like all the other boys, but Army Public Relations said it was good for morale to let them write all about me going in the service. They asked me in camp what branch I thought I'd want.

I PICKED the Cavalry because I liked horses all my life. In June they sent me out to Fort Riley in Kansas and I took my basic there same as anybody. I was there until August when the Army sent me on a boxing tour.

That's where I ran into things that hurt. Like I said, I never knew about race when I was a boy in Alabama. I never went places where the prejudice came up. All through my fighting I kept out of it because Mr. Roxborough told me about Jack Johnson's mistakes and things like that. In the Army I went the same way, but I figured I'm an American fighting for my country like any GI. I figured if I am fighting for a cause and the cause is freedom to keep men equal, I got to stand up for it.

Yost's Error Breaks Up 4-4 Deadlock

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 30.—Along about the cocktail hour today, the Nats' pitching was plastered. They lost a 2-1 lead over the Phillies and took a 7-4 beating before 1500 Tinker Field fans.

Walter Masterson held the Phillies to one run for five innings and then was smacked for a homer by Bill Nicholson in a three-run sixth. Rookies Bill Dozier and Dick Weik, who relieved him, were also battered.

Al Evans reprieved the Nats momentarily in the sixth by getting them a 4-4 tie on a two-run single with the bases full, but that was their high-water mark. After that the Phils took harge.

Ennis Starts It

Rookie Dozier was the victim of a wild throw by Eddie Yost in the seventh and it led to two unearned runs. Dozier, in that inning was also a victim of Al Ennis' single to center, a walk to Nicholson, and Puddenhead Jones' single to right.

Weik pitched the last inning and gave up the Phils' seventh run after pitching a single to Eddie Waitkus and wild-pitching him to second. Jones singled Waitkus home.

Actually the Nats outhit the Phils, 10 to 9, but they were dealing strictly in singles.

Schoolboy Rowe, now pushing 40, took his first outing of the spring for the Phillies and pitched five-hit, two-run ball for four innings. After that, Russ Meyer, an emigre from the Cubs, held the Nats to two runs.

Nats Take Lead

Masterson gave up a run in the first inning when Ashburn and Waitkus doubled to center, but then he settled down to four innings of hitless effort. Meanwhile he started a two-run rally for the Nats with a single in the third. Coan singled to right, stole second and the Nats went in front 2-1 on Lewis' single to right.

Masterson had two out in the sixth when the Phils suddenly came up with three runs. Ennis walked and Nicholson poled one over the right field wall. Miller walked, Masterson threw wild to second on a pick-off play and Jones scored from third when Yost fumbled Lopata's grounder.

Yost's singled to center, a walk to Robinson and Jones' fumble on Kozar's bunt filled the bases with none out in the sixth. Evans rapped the two tying runs home with a single to left, but the Nats got no more out of the inning. In the seventh, they got nothing despite the fact Christman and Lewis led off with singles, and defeat embraced them.

Masterson got a hand from the customers after he pulled out of the fifth without damage despite walking three men to fill the bases with none out . . . he started a double play via the plate on Pinch Hitter Dick Sisler's grounder, and then retired Ashburn at first base . . . Bobo Newsom, loudly denying he has or will sign a contract with Chattanooga, also denied he is on the rooming list of the Chattanooga squad that is going to Havana tomorrow . . . "I have a couple of other deals for myself working," says Newsom blithely. The latest club to reject his services is the Tigers. Because Joe Kuhel's pitching staff is burdened with injuries, the Nats have called off the Monday game with Chattanooga . . . Milo Candini and Ed Klieman are handicapped by knee injuries, Early Davis and Mason Leeper have sore arms, Forrest Thompson a chipped thumb and Dick Welteroth a twinge in his shoulder . . . Lou Bevil and Harold Keller are due to be released to farm clubs before the end of the week . . . thet Nats today had a chance to bring their record against major league opposition to .500 . . . they've lost 7 out of 12.

DiMag Plays 6 Innings, Says He'll Be Okay

St. Petersburg, March 30 (AP). "Well, I'm afraid I'll play another year. It looks like I'll have to work for my money."

That was Joe DiMaggio's way of saying that he was pleased with the first real test of his tender right heel after six innings against the Cincinnati Reds today.

It marked the first game he started during the exhibition tour.

"The pain has not completely gone," he told reporters, "but I'm very happy over the results. It hurt a little, but the pain is decreasing steadily, however. If it lessens a little more, I'll be in good shape.

Asked how much he expected to play, DiMaggio replied grimly "every blankety blank inning."

"Of course I'll know better tomorrow, although I don't expect any reaction," Joe said.

In three times at bat, DiMaggio flied out once, grounded out twice. He didn't exert himself, just jogged to first on each of his ground hits. He caught two flies in centerfield, hardly moving out of his tracks.

Caps Sure They'll Oust N. Y. Tonight

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

New York, March 30.—Having served them with an eviction notice Tuesday, the Caps tomorrow night are determined to force the New York Knicks out of the BAA playoffs in Madison Square Garden.

The occasion is the second game of the semifinal playoffs. If the Caps win, as they are favored to do, the 1948-49 season will be all over for the Knicks and will send the Caps into the championship series against the Minneapolis Lakers, Western Division playoff titlists.

Should the Knicks come through on their home court and tie the series at one victory apiece, the teams will shuttle back to Washington for the rubber match Saturday on the National Guard Armory court.

Even though the Knicks dropped the first game of their first-round set with Baltimore and then bounced back to win the next two from the Bullets, the Caps aren't the slightest bit worried that the series won't end here tomorrow night.

"We're hot now, as hot as we were at the beginning of the season when we won 15 in a row," remarked Bones McKinney.

McKinney's sentiments were echoed by every member of the squad, including the disabled Bob Feerick, who came along to offer vocal assistance.

Coach Red Auerbach plans to start the same unit which opened against New York Tuesday. This includes Johnny Norlander, Sonny Hertzberg, Kleggie Hermsen, Jack Nichols and Dick Schulz. Dick O'Keefe, McKinney, Leo Katkaveck and Freddie Scolari are

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., MARCH 30.—The Cleveland Indians won't win the pennant again. The Red Sox might. The Yankees have only an outside chance. The Athletics aren't good enough, and will finish behind Washington. The Nats will also beat out the Detroit Tigers.

This department makes haste to disassociate itself with all the above declarations. They are the observations of that eternal optimist, Clark Griffith, who has a rooting interest in the Washington Club. Mr. Griffith never surrenders.

POVICH

But the Indians are 6-to-5 favorites to finish in front, Griffith was reminded.

"What do those bookmakers know about baseball? None of 'em ever had on a mitt or swung a bat. It's a good bet that no team ever repeats. In Cleveland's case you can't pick them at all. They're not as good a club as last season. And when they beat the Braves in the World Series, they didn't beat much."

He didn't think that his former performers, Mickey Vernon and Early Wynn, would help the Indians?

"If they don't play better ball for Cleveland than they did for me, they'll hurt the Indians. Too many Cleveland players were playing over their heads last year. The Indians have pretty good pitching, but otherwise they're no great ball team."

But he likes the Red Sox? "They're the best club, but I don's know if they'll win it. If they get better pitching, they will. If they had Washington's pitching they'd breeze in, perhaps the tipoff on the Boston pitching is plain. With all that power behind them last year, only two Boston pitchers could win more than 15 games."

And the Yankees? "They're coming apart. Too many of the old mainstays are cracking up. Di Maggio and Rizzuto and Keller won't be much use. Without them, they're just another ball club, and not too good a one. Nobody in our league has any reason to be afraid of the Yankees."

THE A's who finished fourth, could be a better ball club. "They could be, but who says they are? They look like the same team that finished fourth last year. They haven't strengthened themselves a bit. Neither have the Tigers. We ought to finish in front of both of them."

Why?

"Washington is a better ball club than last year. Remember that outfield we started the season with in 1848. That palooka from Boston, Leon Culberson, and Gil Coan and Sherry Robertson alternating with Tom McBride. That's where we're showing a big improvement."

He meant Buddy Lewis would be a big help?

"Certainly he'll be a big help. How many better outfielders are there in the league, and how many will outhit him? Coan looks like he can't miss making it, and he won't be just an ordinary player, he'll be a great one. We didn't have Ed Stewart at the start last year. We know now what a help he is."

THAT WAS pretty horrible pitching we had last season, except for Ray Scarborough.

"Sure, it was bad, but we had a lot of sick men. Sid Hudson's arm was sore all year. Masterson got away to a bad start. Haefner needed an operation. They don't look like the same men this spring. Hudson's throwing the ball better than he ever did, and he won 17 games one year. Masterson is ready and Haefner is well. Joe Haynes is a good pitcher."

But Eddie Robinson, at first base, hasn't been hitting a lick all spring. "He will, though. Everybody knows he doesn't hit in training camp.

"I've liked him since I saw him with Baltimore eight years ago.

"We'll have good punch. Eddie Yost is a lot better ball player and an improved hitter. And we have a shortstop at last.

"And high time, too; Sam Dente won't hit much, but he can get ground balls.

"Who said he won't hit much? Dente won't hit any home runs, but he's a pest at that plate. He'll hit .280 and do us a lot of good."

Did he mean the Nats would finish in the first division? "Certainly that's what I mean. I don't see four clubs good enough to keep us out of it."

Stephens' Homer Wins For Bosox

Sarasota, Fla., March 30 (U.P.).—Vern Stephens' 380-foot home run in the twelfth inning today ended a tight pitching duel and gave the Boston Red Sox a 1-to-0 exhibition victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Stephens' blow, delivered with two out, was at the expense of Fred Hutchinson, who took over the Tigers' hurling chores after Virgil (Fire) Trucks had pitched six scoreless innings.

Phoenix, Ariz March 30 (AP).—Sid Gordon poled two home runs today as the New York Giants whipped Pittsburgh, 11 to 4, in the opener of a three-game series.

Johnny Mize also hit for the circuit, his third in two days. It came in the seventh after the Polo Grounders had iced the game in the fourth with a five-run splurge off Bill Werle. Gordon's second four-master plated three runs in this frame.

Dodgers Beat Beaumont

Beaumont, Tex., March 30 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers opened a tour of the Texas League today with a 14-2 victory over the Beaumont Exporters before an overflow crowd of 7008. The game was interrupted twice by showers. Ralph Branca went the route, holding the Exporters to four hits.

Indians Win; Lose Gordon

Tucson, Ariz., March 30 (U.P.).—The Cleveland Indians today defeated the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 4, scoring their eleventh victory in 19 games of the spring exhibition season.

Team physicians reported the Indians would have to do without the services of Second Baseman Joe Gordon for a while. They said X-rays showed his right arm was weak and strained. He was advised to take a short vacation. Gordon developed the arm trouble during a recent tour of the West Coast. The Indians slugged Pitchers Fred Bradley and Al Gettel for 12 hits.

El Paso, Tex., March 30 (AP).—Hank Arft's double in the eighth drove in what proved to be the winning run as the St. Louis Browns defeated the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4, in the first of a string of exhibition games in Texas cities.

Ned Garver started for the Brownies and together with reliever Red Embree, who got credit for the victory, allowed the Cubs eight hits.

Boston, March 30 (AP).—The Toronto Maple Leaf defenders gained the Stanley Cup's final round by out-skating the Boston Bruins for a 3-to-2 victory and a four game to one margin in the National Hockey League's B series playoffs tonight before a packed 13,909 crowd at the Boston Garden.

4th Death of Year

Young Boxer Killed in Ring Tried to Quit

San Jose, Calif., March 30 (AP).—Young Billy Cornwell intended to get out of the fight racket—hang up his gloves for good.

Cornwell

A couple of good bouts on the coast—pick up some money fast—

But it didn't work out that way.

Last night the Des Moines fighter, lightweight champion of Iowa, caught a straight right on the chin from Tote Martinez, smacked the canvas so hard that his head bounced several inches. The thud was heard all over the arena.

Never regaining consciousness, Corwell died this morning in a San Jose hospital. Brain concussion; the second such injury he had received in his ring career.

His was the fourth known ring death this year. Carl Byas, at Jefferson City, Mo.; Art Jackson at Toledo, Ohio, and Ali Mekoui in Algiers, all had gone the same way.

Hazards of the fight game were well known to Cornwell. He had been in 38 professional fights, won all but five of them. On October 18, 1947, he was knocked out by Nick Diaz in another San Jose bout, incurring a slight concussion.

He quit the ring briefly; then resumed fighting in his home State of Iowa, winning the lightweight title.

About a month ago he told a Des Moines newsman:

"I've got to get my money fast and get out. I'm going to the coast, get a couple of good matches and hang up my gloves for good."

Midway in the ninth round, Martinez connected with a straight right and down went the Iowan. Referee Vern Bybee counted him out and a doctor had him carried to the dressing room. Although spectators didn't know it, he was in bad shape and was quickly transferred to O'Connor Hospital.

There, two doctors worked on him all night, keeping him alive with transfusions and oxygen. His condition was so critical they couldn't risk an operation.

The usual investigations of such ring casualties were started.

An autopsy to determine the exact cause of Cornwell's death was ordered.

Hoyas Beat Dartmouth, 4-3, In 9th Inning of Opener

Georgetown's battery teamed up yesterday to get the Hoyas off to a winning start as they defeated Dartmouth, 4-3, in a well-played opener at Medical School field.

After Billy Carroll limited the visitros to eight hits, peppery Johnny Moskal, little catcher, won the game for him in the ninth by smashing a single to left center that scored Pinch Runner Lou Miller.

Carroll's performance was heartening to Coach Joe Judge, former Nat great, starting his tenth season with Georgetown. The Gonzaga product apparently is fully recovered from the operation on his pitching arm during the off season.

Al Quirk went seven innings for Dartmouth and Bill Sutton, who finished up, was the loser. Both were handicapped by the five errors committed, four by the Big Green keystone combination.

Shortstop Al Naples was Georgetown's batting ace with a triple and two singles; Ray Corley, District's outstanding collegiate basketball player, hit two singles in three trips.

Mauler Recalls War Story

Dempsey Gives Cocky Sailor One-Punch Boxing Lesson

Hartford, Conn., March 30 (AP). Nearly everyone thinks, says Arthur McGinley, sports editor of the Hartford Times, that Jack Dempsey's last fight was the one he lost to Gene Tunney on September 22, 1927, in Chicago.

But the one-time worlds champ had another under his belt. The scene was a transport deck in the Pacific and the time midway through World War II.

There were no million dollar gate, no referee, no seconds, and, strangest of all, it was between a 50-year-old commander of the Coast Guard and a husky young enlisted man who had once served as a sparring partner for heavyweights including Joe Louis.

Dempsey was in town the other day and told the story to McGinley:

"This bird was making himself pretty objectionable—bullying the other men," recalled Jack. "One day there was a boxing show and this guy knocked his opponent cold. So he began to boast that no so and so on that ship could lick him.

"It burned me, but naturally I didn't say anything—I was an officer and he an enlisted man but finally he walked up to me and said, 'you're a great fighter, you're an ex-champ. How about you?'

"I knew I had no right to fight him—that it was strictly against regulations. But before I knew it, I had stripped down and was in there with him.

"I said to myself, 'are you going daffy at 50 fighting a fellow about 23 or 24,' but there wasn't any time for thinking about it.

"This bird was pretty good, and in the first round he batted me around, and I thought I was in for the licking I deserved for not having better sense.

"But then came the break. He came out for the second with his guard down. I could see he thought it was going to be pretty soft.

"I knew this was my only chance and I put everthing back of that one 'shot.' It was a punch with a prayer riding it if ever there was one.

"I landed flush on the fellow's jaw and he went down and out.

"There was never another peep out of this bird who had admitted he could lick the world.

"I expected to be court-martialed—an officer fighting an enlisted man.

"And I sure would have been if I had lost."

Yanks Beat Out Cincinnati, 7 to 6

DiMaggio Hitless in Three Tries

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 30 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio made his first appearance in the starting line-up today as the New York Yankees edged the Cincinnati Reds, 7-6, in 11 innings.

DiMaggio played six innings and went hitless in three times at bat. The Yankee clipper batted in one run with a fly ball and had no occasion to run hard. The winning run came when First Baseman Charles Kress fumbled a ground ball which allowed George Stirnweiss to scoot home from third base.

Braves Edge Cards; Dark Drives in 6

Bradenton, Fla., March 30 (U.P.).—Ray Sander's long single with two out in the last half of the ninth which scored Pinch Runner Marv Rickert from second enabled the Boston Braves to shade the St. Louis Cardinals 12 to 11 in a see-saw slugfest today.

The game's standout was Alvin Dark of the Braves who walloped two inside-the-park homers and drove across six runs.

Laurel Merger Action Near; Harness Commission Rejected

Annapolis, Md., March 30 (AP).—Lobbyists by the dozen roamed the Statehouse today as the decisive hour neared on a bill to allow the Maryland Jockey Club to abandon Pimlico race track and consolidate its meetings in Laurel.

The pressure was on as it seldom had been in recent years.

The bill passed the Senate last week, but opponents of the legislation were on hand for an all-out effort to kill it in the House.

Backers rallied their forces in a counter-move to clear the way to final passage.

The result, as summed up a veteran House member:

"There is more pressure from both sides on the Pimlico bill than there was in 1947 before the sales tax came up for vote."

The 79-year-old Pimlico racing plant is in northwest Baltimore. Rather than make further improvements there, the Jockey Club wants to pick up a $700,000 improvement fund and use it to enlarge its Laurel track, midway between Baltimore and Washington.

Under the bill, the Pimlico-Laurel combine would be allowed 50 days of racing a year. The other 50 days of major racing are divided between Bowie and Havre de Grace.

Bowie operators contend the shift would concentrate too much racing in a small section of the State.

The State Racing Commission has approved the transfer.

Meanwhile, harness racing officials lost their bid today for a separate State commission to supervise their sport.

The House Judiciary Committee voted an unfavorable report on a measure which would have removed control of pacing and trotting events from the State racing commission.

Delegate McNulty (D.) of Anne Arundel, an officer of the Maryland harness horse association, had put in the measure to set up a new three-member harness commission.

After hearing protests today, the committee voted to retain dual control of flat and harness meetings in the present racing commission. McNulty said he was undecided about making an effort to revive his bill.

Arm Amputees To Bowl Sunday

Visitors at Walter Reed General Hospital's Open House program this Sunday will have the opportunity to see arm-amputee bowlers in action on the hospital's alleys, it was announced today.

Capt. Emmett C. Townsend, athletic director and special services officer of the post disclosed that the armless keglers will exhibit their skill at a special demonstration, in connection with the Army Week celebration at the Medical Center.

Poston Sinks 80 Straight Free Throws

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Charles (Bucky) Poston is a cinch to win the Boys Club of America's free-throw championship for the second straight year, but not on his performance in the Interhigh League.

Playing for Western, he made only 36 out of 76 foul-line shots in league play. With less pressure on him, Bucky put in 80 straight the other day.

Two thousand youngsters from 300 Boys Clubs all over the Nation enter the annual free throw derby. Each contestant gets five practice throws, and then, before two accredited witnesses, shoots 60 times.

The best performance at each club is then wired to the Boys Club of America headquarters in New York City where the champion is determined. The 1949 titlist will be announced next week.

Last year, Bucky dropped in 60 straight, and then quit. This year, after putting in 60 in a row before Athletic Directors Paul Cassassa and Joe Branzell at the Georgetown Branch Boys Club, Bucky kept on shooting. He didn't miss until his eighty-first try.

Bucky's three-point formula for successful foul-line shooting is:

1. Relax and count to seven before taking aim,

2. Aim at the front of the hoop.

3. Use the two-handed, underhand motion in shooting.

Luckily, Bucky didn't need any more free throws to win the Interhigh scoring title last season. His 147 points were enough to beat Central's Jimmy Pantos, who finished second with 141.

Lacrosse, conspicuously absent from the District and area high school athletic program, has picked up four local devotees at the University of Virginia, where the sport is making its bow this year. Charlie Guy, former athletic director at Bullis Prep, is the coach. And three of his mainstays are Billy Sinclair, Howard Bonham and Bruce Padgett, who played football at George Washington High of Alexandria, Western and Devitt Prep, respectively . . . The Nats' loss is Bell Vocational High's gain. Gene Melito is retiring as Nat batboy this year, to pitch for Bell. Gene is a promising righthanded curve-baller with good control . . . The 16th and Kennedy recreation area resembles the Dodgers' crowded training camp. St. Paul's, St. John's, Devitt and Bell are all holding baseball practice at the old reservoir site because they have no fields of their own . . . Duke University's track team is counting heavily on two D. C. area sophomores, Johnny Colvin, former G. W. High sprinter . . . Representative Gerald R. Ford (R., Mich.) will be guest speaker at the Metropolitan Washington High and Prep School Coaches Association Monday night at the Touchdown Club . .

Recreation Department Titles at Stake Tonight

The District Recreation Department decides its women's and men's senior basketball championships tonight at Roosevelt High gymnasium.

Garvin's and Raleigh clash for the women's title at 8 p. m., and Cavalier and Naiman's play off for the men's crown at 9:30. Pacing the Cavalier team will be Gerald Burns, Acky Viana and Ray Love. Naiman's will bank on Ted Walsh and Bob Berry.

The Pincher Fades and Finishes 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., March 30.—The squeeze play that Henry H. Hecht's The Pincher was supposed to pull here today failed to materialize and victory in the first running of the $10,000-added Farrell Handicap went to Daniel Hess' Blue Lancer.

Making only the fourth start of his career, the son of Blue Swords simply turned on too much heat for his 3-year-old rivals and came into the finish line 2½ lengths in front of Mort Stuart's Best Doings in the field of nine.

The Pincher, holder of the Pimlico 6-furlong record of 1:10 1-5 and considered a Preakness candidate of merit, must have left his race in a recent 1:13 workout here, for he stopped like he was shot after leading most of the way and was third.

Pays $22.60

Blue Lancer, a New York-owned colt, was clocked in an excellent 1:11, only two fifths of a second over the track record for the 6 furlongs owned by Grenock. Blue Lancer, strongly handled by Jockey Al Schmidl, carried only 108 pounds to 122 for The Pincher.

The crowd of 12,000, watching racing under faultless conditions, installed The Pincher as the odds-on favorite. The happy folks who lined up at the pay-off windows, however, received a return of $22.60 for the usual $2 investment.

The Pincher looked all the part of a winner in the early stages. Jockey Mike Basile sent him between horses to get to the front in the opening furlong and the Hecht hope opened a length advantage on Eternal Dream and Blue Lancer, the latter in on the rail.

All Blue Lancer

Jam Session, carrying the Gustave Ring colors, came up on the outside to threaten as the field left the backstretch. The Pincher began to wilt heading into the stretch and Blue Lancer, under a drive by Schmidl, shook off The Pincher as if the Preakness colt was tied. Jam Session, unbeaten in his previous three starts, also quit.

In the stretch it was all Blue Lancer. Best Doings rallied to catch the leg-weary The Pincher but was unable to menace the winning colt.

Long-shot players had their innings on the program. After Mrs. C. C. Tanner's Sickle Flight won the first race at $7.40, J. N. Fishback's Balbar went to the front and stayed there to the tune of a $31.20 mutuel. Those who coupled Sickle Flight and Balbar in the daily double—the combination was 5 and 7—were paid $146.40.

The day's banner price, however, was hung up by P. J. Carey's Brevrome. The 7-year-old mare withstood several challenges and paid $50.60 in the third event.

ready for first-line reserve duty with Matt Zunic, his ankle better, also set to give it a go.

Coach Joe Papchick of the Knicks, who confessed that he thought the jig was up for his Knicks, will string along with Ray Lumpp, Harry Gallatin, Bill Van Breda Kolff, Carl Braun and Johnny Palmer.

Lapchick was disappointed over the showing of Lumpp in the series opener. The former NYU star had a hot first half, scoring 13 points, but went to pot after intermission, collecting only two free throws.

REBOUNDS—A chartered plane containing Cap rooters leaves D. C. at 6 p. m. tomorrow, returning shortly after the game . . . Auerbach arrived here today to talk with Wah Wah Jones and Cliff Barker, Kentucky U. stars whom the Caps drafted. Jones and Barker are here to play in Saturday's East-West college all-star game . . . Red also plans to confer with Sam White, Washington U's great playmaker . . . The final series between the Eastern winner and Minneapolis opens in Minneapolis Monday, continues there Wednesday and then shifts over to the Eastern court. It's a best four of seven affair.

Bill Bennings:

AT BOWIE

Horsemen now can insure horse they are claiming. The Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association has arranged for blanket coverage at a fee of $5 per $2500 valuation. Claiming is the system of posting a certain sum and acquiring the horse after the race. Under the rules, the horse is delivered to the new owner dead or alive or broken down. If more than one claim is made, the claimants draw. In the past, horsemen have drawn for a dead horse. The insurance covers the horse until it is delivered to the new owner. The system originated in Florida last winter and saved $5000 on one occasion when a horse had to be destroyed after a race. See you on the rail.

Sonny Meets Gavilan's Master

Classy Ratford Provides Test For West Monday at Turner's

If Sonny Boy West, the heralded D. C. lightweight, is the fighter he's supposed to be he'll have to show it at Turner's Arena Monday night against Doug Ratford.

Ratford, classy New York lightweight, is the toughest foe West has been called on to meet since the local lad became a pro two years ago. Ratford has never been knocked out, and his four-year pro record shows 17 victories, 12 defeats and five draws.

His victims include Kid Gavilan, No. 1 challenger for Ike Williams' 135-pound title, and Freddy Dawson, outstanding Chicago welterweight.

Ratford has whipped Gavilan, who meets Williams in a nontitle go Friday night, twice. He did it the first time in 1947 and repeated in 1948. He has also boxed a draw with Gene Burton, another Chicago luminary.

West is being readied to headline several outdoor shows at Griffith Stadium, but he'll certainly upset the plans of matchmakers and himself if he slips up against Ratford.

West, only 20 now, has won 69 of his 73 bouts as a pro and amateur, and has been defeated only 3 times since fighting for money. His most prominent victory came in Baltimore last month when he shellacked Johnny Williams.

Leachman Fans 16, Virginia Wins

Charlottesville, March 30.—Jack Leachman of Washington, D. C., struck out 16 men and limited Haverford to four hits as Virginia defeated Haverford, 3 to 2, here today.

It was Virginia's second win this season. Haverford's scoring came in the fifth inning when Buddy Boteler, Haverford's catcher, hit a 325-foot triple into right centerfield bringing in their two runs.

Quantico Loses To Richmond

Quantico, Va., March 30.—A squeeze play which developed into a two-run "homer" in the ninth inning gave the University of Richmond a 4-2 victory over the Quantico Marine baseballers here today.

With the score tied, 2-2, Ralph Graves tripled to open the Richmond ninth. Marine First Baseman Jerry Donovan then threw Jack Morris' bunt into rightfield, permitting Graves to score. Rightfielder Jim Blue uncorked a wild throw to second, and Morris came all the way around to score.

Ike Williams Ready for Gavilan

By Red Smith

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., March 30 (NYHT).—There was a three-handed stud game going in the old Brown House, where Washington did not sleep, but Joe Louis and Max Baer and countless other fighters did. Ike Williams was playing with the training camp chef and the young man who waits on the table, and there was a fair-to-middling clutter of banknotes in front of them.

Red Smith

They played swiftly and silently, pausing only now and then when Ike fumbled making change in $1 bills.

"Ought get one of the mangers to count these for me," he said.

"You'll wind up richer this way," somebody told him. He grunted, dead-panned. The lightweight champion of the world is almost expressionless, friendly enough, but not especialy communicative, being more inclined to listen than to talk.

In a little while the game broke up and he walked past the outdoor ring into the low wooden building that houses training quarters. This was to be his last workout before his return match in Madison Square Garden Friday night with Kid Gavilan, the Cuban cutie who received a split decision—and in this book an unearned one—the last time they met.

"Are you hot about this fight, Ike?"

"Yeh, I want him. I want him."

"Somebody said you told him you wanted Gavilan this time more than you'd ever wanted another fight, except your second one with Bob Montgomery when you won the title."

"THAT'S RIGHT," he said. He had peeled off his shirt and stood bare to the waist, flexing his shoulders. Somebody remarked that he hadn't got any the better of the judging in the last Gavilan bout.

"I thought I was winning," he said. "I thought I won the fight. He never fought except in the last half-minute of a round. He ain't gonna do it again. The last 30 seconds, there ain't gonna be no fight."

"You think you can stop him?" Gavilan has not been knocked out.

"I think I got a very good chance to knock him out," Ike said. "He's got no punch. He hits like this, front of the glove, just slapping. He never gives you this." Williams doubled a fist and threw a straight right.

"That last round, they gave it to him and that gave him the decision, he never hit me once. I beat him good the first 2 minutes and then at the finish when he was throwing all them slap punches, I was locking 'em and still hitting him."

Blinky Palermo, curator of the champion, had been in Philadelphia, but now he arrived with Jimmy Wilson, the trainer, while Ike dressed for work, Blinky pelted a knot of victims with rhetoric.

"Did you see the Montgomery fight? Remember Ike that night? Well, you're gonna see the same guy this time. Sharp? He's as sharp and mean as a guy can get."

"HE WAS a great lightweight that night," Harry Markson said.

"Wait a minute," Blinky said. "Let me finish. Two weeks ago if we fight he gets licked. He was too fine. Then we have him five days' rest and that was the best thing he could of had. Two weeks ago I told him, 'You're champion of the world, right? Well, since when does the champion of the world let these sort of guys up here punch 'im around like they're punching you around?' I told him, 'You can't win, Ike. I think you're stale.' He says, 'You're right.'

"Then he had those five days' rest and now, is he sharp, is he mean? Wait'll you see 'im."

Somebody said, "You like to see a fighter mean before a fight."

"He's all temperamental," Blinky said, and he asked Jimmy Wilson, "How is he? Like the Montgomery fight?"

"Worse," Wilson said.

Lunch was ready in the main house, and before it was finished word came down that Williams was ready to start. Blinky hurried his meal and hustled away. When the others finished and started the slope toward the gym, Blinky came down crying, "All over."

"He's done," Blinky said. "He just boxed two rounds because he's sharp now and that's all he needs. He's all temperamental. I only got to see half a round myself. Me, his manager. He's all temperamental. He's really sharp, I tell you."

Wilson Wins Track Meet

FIRST RECORD AND CHANGER EVER DESIGNED TO WORK TOGETHER . . .

● TODAY (at your dealer's) you can see a completely new system of recorded music. It is not just a new size of record or a new type of player, but an entirely new kind of musical enjoyment . . . the climax of ten years of RCA Victor research and development.

This research aimed at a new standard for recorded music by creating for the first time a record and changer to work together:

1. It had to sound better than any ever heard before.
2. The instrument was to look more easily, and to change records more quickly, more quietly, and more dependably than any ever built.
3. The new record had to carry as much music as a conventional 12-inch record. All records for all types of music had to be the same size, to leave you free to buy and play exactly the music you want, of any type, with no enforced combinations.
4. BOTH the record and the instrument were to fit modern living by being at once smaller and lighter.
5. It must do all this . . . and cost less.

The result is here now . . . for you to see TODAY! The world's simplest, fastest changer. And such a glorious TONE . . . so clear, so lifelike, so completely free of distortion!

But you must see and hear it for yourself! For in the new 45 rpm Victrola† system, RCA Victor sincerely believes that a completely new standard of value and performance has been established . . . a standard unmatched by any other record or record player available to the public. We are firmly convinced that this system will be the criterion for the future! Be one of the early ones . . . go to your dealer's and give yourself a demonstration today!

The secret of "live-talent" quality

As the diagram shows, all records have a "quality zone" where the music can be undistorted. But toward the center of conventional records is a "distortion zone" where the music loses clarity and brilliance. On the new Victrola† 45 rpm recordings, for the first time in history, ALL the music grooves are in the distortion-free "quality zone." And, with the new non-breakable vinyl plastic records, there is virtually no surface noise!

Bright new colors...

to match the new musical brilliance! Sparkling, translucent green, yellow, sky blue, cerise . . . A different color for each kind of music makes it easier for you to identify the seven different types of selections on the new Victrola† 45 rpm records! Keep your singles sorted by color on your bookshelf!

Why they can cost less...

These smaller records can cost less, despite their finer quality, because of economies in manufacture and packaging. You get non-breakable vinyl plastic for less than standard records . . . only 95¢* for Red Seal . . . only 65¢* for all others!

World's fastest changer!

Acts silently, with trigger-action speed! Far fewer parts than conventional changers . . . works vertically, entirely from within the center spindle. You load up to 10 records with one motion, with one hand . . . press one button to play more than 50 minutes without touching the instrument!

New records last much longer!

Made of vinyl plastic, they last up to 10 times longer than ordinary records. Unique, raised label surfaces on the new 45 rpm records act as "surface-saver" shoulders so music grooves cannot slide across each other. They stay apart as you stack the records, as you hold them, as they stand in your bookcase shelf.

An end to record storage problems!

A complete symphony or Broadway show in the palm of your hand! All the new 45 rpm records are 7 inches in diameter . . . all the same easy-to-handle size that fits into compact new dustproof box albums for your bookcase shelf. 18 albums—or nearly 150 singles—to the foot!

Choose the music you want!

Because all selections—classical and popular—are on the SAME SIZE records, they all fit the same changer . . . to play in any combination you choose. A magnificent library of albums and singles is ready for you to select from . . . and the new releases, too!

If you own a conventional player

Among the leading manufacturers who are participating with RCA Victor in bringing you the new 45 rpm system of recorded music:

ADMIRAL AIR KING ANDREA AUTOMATIC BELMONT BENDIX BOWEN BRUNSWICK CROSLEY DeWALD DYNAVOX EMERSON FADA FARNSWORTH FREED-EISEMANN GAROD • HALLICRAFTERS HOFFMAN MOTOROLA PACKARD-BELL SENTINEL SONORA SPARTON STEWART-WARNER STROMBERG-CARLSON TELE-TONE WELLS-GARDNER

Thousands Would Lose Jobs in Postal Service Under Budget Trim

Upward of 7000 postal employes would have to be fired if the postoffice Department's House-approved budget is enacted into law. The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday was asked to restore most of the 34 millons cut from the budget by the House.

Postal officials estimate that the mail volume will increase by about 4.5 per cent during the 1950 fiscal year. Nevertheless, they asked for funds to hire less than 500 additional employes. The House slash would force the department to do more work with fewer employes.

PAYDAY: They had a tough time raising the money, but all of the employes in the Office of the Housing Expediter here will be paid in full tomorrow, the regular payday. Also, funds are available to meet the next payday for OHE's field employes. But that's about all.

OHE funds have been tied up for weeks in Congress in the first deficiency bill. The House passed the bill two months ago and the Senate Appropriations Committee has reported it to the full Senate. OHE has had to postpone paying all bills except for salaries and travel in order to meet its payroll.

DECENTRALIZATION: Patman (D., Tex.) has suggested to the Congress the possibility of moving all or part of the Federal agencies here to other parts of the country . . . Congress' most outspoken advocate of further decentralization of Government is Senator Wiley (R., Wis.). Toward his objective, he wants the Army's Quartermaster Corps to build its proposed research center at Madison, Wis.

OVERTIME: The Comptroller General has ruled that an employe who is authorized to attend meetings outside of his 40-hour work week such as on Saturdays and Sundays is entitled to overtime pay.

GUN FACTORY: It has eight employes here who have a minimum of 40 years of service each—a record that can be equaled by very few, if any, Federal agencies. Most of them could retire today at maximum retirement pay. The old-timers who are still on the job are:

Frank J. McLane, who has taken only 2½ days of sick leave in his long career; Sidney K. Williams, Louis F. Ortman, Richard O. Herberger, Harry B. Bothwell, Arthur E. Brashears, Royden J. Dixon, and Robert M. Wills.

POSTOFFICE wouldn't be required to pay subsidies to the airlines under a White House plan that's being whipped into shape. It would pay the airlines a fair rate for services performed in carrying air mail and nothing more. And Postoffice, not the Civil Aeronautics Board, would determine the cost. The CAP would have authority to pay subsidies under certain conditions to the airlines that needed them to remain in business. The President has discussed this plan with Postoffice and CAB officials.

NOTES: Representative O'Konski (R., Wis.) is seeking larger appropriations for the Farmers Home Administration. He says it has helped his district more than any other Federal agency . . . Representative Kelly (D., Pa.) will head up a subcommittee of the House Labor Committee that will hold hearings soon on the Administration's bill to liberalize the employe compensation laws . . . Employes of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory have heard rumors that time-clocks may be installed there. . . . The nomination of Thomas C. Buchanan to be a member of the Federal Power Commission has been hanging fire for months.

RECLAMATION: Senator Downey (D., Calif.) is continuing his slam-bang fight against the administration of the Reclamation Bureau. He won a big victory—perhaps a temporary one—when the Senate Appropriations Committee voted to continue tight restrictions on Reclamation personnel. Now Downey has followed up with a resolution for another investigation of the agency with particular emphasis on what he says is wasteful and unnecessary personnel at both headquarters here and in the State and project offices.

ITEMS: Representative Hardin Peterson (D., Fla.) will speak to the National Association of Retired Civil Employes Saturday at 2 p. m. at the National Museum, 10th and Constitution ave. . . . it's open house Sunday from 1 to 4 p. m. at Walter Reed Hospital in observance of Army Week . . . The National Symphony Orchestra will give a concert tomorrow night at Arlington Farms' recreation hall. Tickets are $1.20 for general admission; 90 cents for Federal workers, and 60 cents for girls at the farms . . .

FHA Calls Halt On New Building For High Rents

Search for Tenants For $70-$100 Units Brings Apartment Program Curtailment

Fear of overbuilding of apartments renting from $70 to $100 a month has prompted the local FHA insuring office to curtail its vast rental program here, an FHA spokesman said last night.

With several new garden-type apartments in the outlying areas already searching for tenants at $90 and up, and several more projects under way or approved, FHA said the rental demand in the field would be filled.

The act authorizing the emergency rental program expires at midnight tonight, but a rider to the rent bill would extend the program for another 90 days.

Construction of several hundred units renting at $60 for one bedroom, $70 for two bedrooms, will start soon, the result of overtime work by the FHA staff to process the mortgage insurance applications before the midnight deadline.

Proposed projects in the $60-$70 rentals also are included in the shut-off order, as FHA reported enough approved new apartments to take care of rental demand in that bracket.

Approval Is Expected For 1135-Unit Project

The largest postwar rental project in the District of Columbia, a proposed 1135-unit, 8-story apartment building to cover 4 acres at 16th and Piney Branch Parkway, nw., is expected to be approved by FHA today. It dwarfs a previous rental giant, the proposed 860-unit Quebec House at Connecticut ave., Porter and Quebec sts. nw.

Jonathon Woodner Co. is the builder. The project will be called Rock Creek Plaza. Construction is not expected to start before fall. FHA allows 18 months for completion ofter date of approval.

Seventy per cent of the apartments will be efficiency units, with the remainder one and two bedroom units. Rental prices have not been announced. Wallace F. Holladay is the architect.

In reference to the halt in applications, a Government source said FHA "probably" would consider a limited number of new garden-type apartments for Negro occupancy. There is an unfilled need for such rental units for minorities, it was indicated.

An estimated 60 apartment projects are now being processed by FHA, involving 7000 rental units. The local FHA office already has approved nearly 26,000 rental units, of which an estimated 10,000 units are finished and occupied.

Although a list of projects which FHA has or will approve this week has not been announced, it was learned that Idaho Terrace, a 206 unit building to be erected at Idaho and Cathedral aves. nw., has received the green light.

Also expected to be approved are these large projects:

Riverside Apartments, 225 units, Lee blvd. and Fort Myer dr., Arlington; a 166 unit, 8-story apartment at 1930 Columbia rd. nw.; 8-story, 271 unit apartment at 1709 Massachusetts ave. nw., and a 820-unit garden type development at Lee blvd. and Patrick Henry dr., near Falls Church, Va.

Ex-Reporter Gets Pentagon Post

James F. King, former Washington Post reporter and recently consultant to Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall, was named deputy director of the Office of Public Information in the National Military Establishment yesterday.

A native of Georgetown, S. C., King is a Harvard graduate. He worked on South Carolina newspapers, on the Washington Post from 1943 to 1944, and later on the Washington Daily News, and the Baltimore Sun.

In his new job he will be chief assistant to William Frye, named director of the Military Establishment's Information Office last week.

Called Penny Wise

D. C. School Budgetary Practices Hit

By James B. Graham
Post Reporter

The District's school budget practices were termed "penny wise and pound foolish" last night by Dean James Harold Fox of the George Washington University School of Education.

Dr. Fox was one of four speakers in a panel discussion of school needs sponsored by the Burroughs Citizens Association in cooperation with the Parent-Teachers Associations of the Taft Junior High and Burroughs Elementary School.

The discussion was held in the Taft School auditorium, 18th and Perry sts. ne.

Ten Billion Behind, He Says

The District is 10 billion dollars behind in its school construction needs, Dr. Fox charged, and even if the full budget request for 1950 is granted, it will fall behind another two billion next year. He challenged the validity of the "pay-as-you-go" policy of the municipal government, saying funds budgeted for new construction are being required to keep existing buildings in usable condition.

"It is wasteful economy to put off purchasing of needed building sites until construction funds are available," he said. "They will only cost more later on."

Others Making Talks

Other speakers on the panel were Dr. M. Virginia O'Neil, supervisor of student teaching at Wilson Teachers College; John M. Riecks, associate superintendent of schools in charge of buildings and grounds; and Miss Mary Titus, Federal legislative assistant for the National Education Association.

After the discussion, the citizens' group went on record in favor of a Federal loan to cover required school construction.

A program of songs and dances was presented by students of Taft Junior High and exhibits of work by students in art, science, home economics and crafts classes were displayed in the corridors.

2 Hurt When Legation Car, Cab Collide

Two persons were hurt yesterday when a car driven by a Liberian diplomat collided with a cab in the 3700 block of 16th st. nw.

Driver of the car, police said, was George B. Stevenson, 33, of 1711 S st. nw., who is firs' secretary at the Liberian Legation. Operator of the cab was James D. Browne, 63, of 319 Farragut st. nw.

Police said Pvt. William B. Phares of the Accident Investigation Unit noted on his report that Stevenson's car left skid marks of 110 feet and that he detected an odor of alcohol about Stevenson.

The report added there were no charges in the case, that a diplomat was involved and that there might be a hearing in the corporation counsel's office.

Police said the accident occurred at 11:05 a. m., that both cars were going north on 16th st., and that Browne was making a "U" turn.

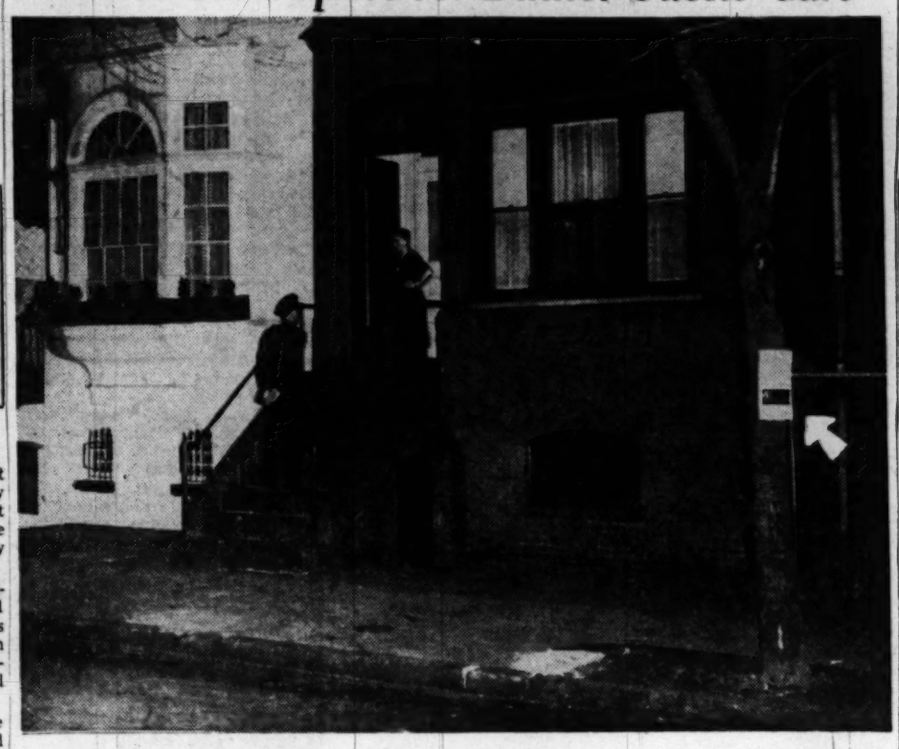
Browne was taken to Garfield Hospital and treated for injuries to his left arm and shoulder. A passenger in his cab, Irene Sweeney, 42, of 3535 Holmead pl. nw., was taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for scalp lacerations and admitted for X-rays.

Stevenson complained that several of his teeth had been jarred loose but he did not receive hospital treatment.

Correction

James Arthur Miller, 60, of 731 12th st. se., will retire today after almost 43 years' service at the Naval Gun Factory, where he is an instrument maker in the radio laboratory. The Washington Post incorrectly printed Miller's first name as "Jean" yesterday, and regrets the error.

Commissioner Young Uses 'Emergency' Signs To Clear Curb Space for Dinner Guests' Cars



The Washington Post

"EMERGENCY—NO PARKING"—The curb in front of Commissioner John Russell Young's residence, 1834 Jefferson pl. nw., is cleared of automobiles to make room for the cars of dinner guests. One of three "Emergency—No Parking" signs (arrow) is shown on a tree. A policeman converses on the Commissioner's steps.

Loyalty Check Casualties 75 In 2¼ Million

(NYHT News Service).

Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Federal Loyalty Review Board, said yesterday that out of 2,250,000 Government employes checked for loyalty, only about 75 will have been dismissed by the end of June as a result of adverse rulings.

"If the loyalty program did nothing else," he told a Rotary Club luncheon here, "it told the world that all but one-tenth of 1 per cent of all Federal employes are the finest of loyal Americans."

The loyalty probe chairman, who described himself as "deeply rooted in Republicanism," defended the Federal Bureau of Investigation against criticism for its procedures in the investigation of individual employes and applicants for Government jobs, pointing out that FBI itself cleared one-third of the 7500 men and women it originally determined should be exposed to full field investigations. The rest, except "in the neighborhood of 75," Richardson said, are being cleared as a result of hearings.

"Does that sound like a bloodthirsty outfit maliciously trying to railroad people out of Government?" he asked.

Gallinger Record

D. C. Girl, 11, Gives Birth to 4-Pound Son

Gallinger Hospital recorded what it believed its youngest mother yesterday when an 11-year-old Washington girl gave birth to a 4-pound son.

The girl, Thelma Long, 921 Golden st. sw., was termed "the youngest mother we've ever had here as far as we know," by Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, hospital superintendent.

He said Thelma arrived at 3 a. m. and her son put in an appearance an hour and 22 minutes later. The birth was normal and mother and child were reported in good condition.

A 10-year-old mother is the youngest recorded in this country in the files of the American Medical Association, Dr. Sweeney said. He recalled a 13-year-old mother who gave birth to her second child at Gallinger several months ago.

"Members of races originating in warm climates mature earlier," Dr. Sweeney said.

Neighbor Complains; 2 Policemen on Hand, But Are 'Not Assigned'

"Emergency-No Parking" signs were fastened to three trees in front of Commissioner John Russell Young's home yesterday to clear the curb for the Commissioner's dinner guests.

Complaints from an irate neighbor who said he couldn't find parking space brought a reporter out to the Commissioner's house at 1834 Jefferson pl. nw.

A police sergeant and private standing in front of the red brick house said they were on duty but not assigned to the house; they just happened to be standing there. They didn't know what the signs were up for.

Commissioner Young told a reporter that he was expecting some dinner guests, and since it was hard to find parking space in the area, he had reserved spaces for three cars.

Parking on Jefferson pl. is normally restricted to one hour between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. The emergency signs forbade parking after 4 p. m. yesterday.

Third Precinct Station police said they usually grant requests for reserved parking space for weddings, moving, receptions and coal deliveries. They don't ordinarily put up emergency signs for dinner guests, police said.

The Commissioner said the signs would be up only until about 6:30 p. m. About 6:45 p. m., while talking to a reporter, the Commissioner decided the signs had been up long enough and ordered the private to remove them. His guests hadn't arrived as yet.

Then Commissioner Young said he hadn't asked for any policemen in front of his house. The private left. The sergeant had strolled off earlier.

Man Is Given 90 Days For Indecent Exposure

Lawrence W. Howland, 35-year-old elevator operator, was sentenced yesterday to serve 90 days in jail for indecent exposure February 14 in the G. C. Murphy Co., 1214 G st. nw.

Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court imposed an additional $200 fine on Howland for assaulting store detective Samuel Lehman during the arrest.

Will Leaving Tenant House Ruled Invalid

A District Court jury decided yesterday that the late Mrs. Nellie C. King had not put her signature to a will which left her $6500 house to a tenant.

Mrs. King, 76, died here November 25, 1947. After her death, a will written on the back of a photograph and dated November 1, 1947, was introduced as her will.

The will left the house, at 5227 5th st. nw., to Lee Ellsworth, who had been a neighbor of Mrs. King and later with his wife moved into Mrs. King's home. Mrs. King was a widow and had no children.

About $2100 in other property was variously distributed under terms of the so-called will.

The signature was challenged by Mrs. King's sister, Catherine Cooney; a niece, Mrs. Edith Marion O'Brien, and a nephew, Charles O'Brien, all of Boston.

The jury sitting in the court of Judge Matthew F. McGuire accepted the testimony of Ira Gulickson, Metropolitan Police Department handwriting expert, that the signature was a forgery.

Attorneys Stanley Fischer and Joseph J. Malloy represented the Boston relatives who will inherit all Mrs. King's estate as a result of the jury's decision.

Strict Deposit Rule Adopted By Hospital

Beginning Friday, the Alexandria Hospital will tighten up its policy of requiring deposits on admission from patients whose hospitalization insurance only partly covers their bills.

Hospital Administrator Van C. Adams said no deposit will be required of patients whose insurance covers a major portion of their expected bill. But, he said, those with policies providing only limited coverage will be expected to make a deposit scaled to the extent of coverage.

The hospital said a somewhat similar policy had been in effect before, but that it will now be adhered to more strictly. Non-emergency patients owning no insurance will continue to make a $75 deposit on admission, the official said.

Adams said that insurance policies vary widely in coverage and advised persons to read them carefully before buying so they will know the degree of their protection. "In the past," he said, "persons with very limited insurance policies have believed . . . that the policy would take care of everything."

Police Sergt. Dawn Will Retire Today

District Commissioners have approved the retirement of Police Sergt. James E. Dawn, 51, effective today, at the rate of $161 a month pay.

Sergeant Dawn, a member of the department for almost 20 years, was injured in a scout car accident in December, 1947.

40,000 See Cherry Blossoms As Thermometer Goes to 80

A more than slightly warm day yesterday drew an estimated 40,000 persons to the Tidal Basin to inspect the cherry blossoms as Washington experienced its second hottest March 30 on record.

The day's high, of 80 degrees, came at 2:30 p. m. Only hotter March 30, according to Weather Bureau records, came in 1910 when the temperature reached 86.

With plans just about "jelled" for the Cherry Blossom Festival on Saturday and Sunday, Washingtonians and the anticipated 250,000 weekend visitors can look forward to predicted good weather on Friday and Saturday.

Sunday, the weatherman says, may bring scattered showers. Showers late today also are forecast, although temperatures will be mild.

The pageant will go into dress rehearsal at 8 p. m. today in the National Press Auditorium. A dress rehearsal for the festival ball will be held at 2 p. m. Friday in the National Guard Armory.

From now through Sunday, 200 million candlepower of light will be turned on the blooming cherry trees around the Tidal Basin nightly to give Washingtonians and visitors alike a 24-hour view.

The festival ball will start at 9 p. m. Friday at the National Guard Armory.

Tickets for the festival ball at $3 a person may be obtained by calling Sterling 3535.

The Cherry Blossom Festival itself will start at 1:30 p. m. Saturday in the Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument Grounds. It will be preceded by an hour-long concert by the United States Navy Band.

A water carnival will be staged at 8 p. m. Saturday in the Tidal Basin. Simultaneously, the United States Marine Corps Band will give a concert at the Jefferson Memorial, and the Washington Monument will remain open until 10 p. m. for those who want an air view of the basin.

On Sunday, the festival pageant will be repeated at 2 p. m., and the water carnival at 8 p. m., weather permitting.

Tickets for the pageant, at $1 for adults and 60 cents for children are available at all Peoples Drug Stores in Greater Washington, at the D. C. Information Center in the Evening Star Building, and at the mobile caravan in Post Squort at 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

The caravan will be shifted to the Monument Grounds Saturday.

Young Slated To Keep District Engineer Post

In Senate

New Fight Brewing on Sales Tax

Senate wheels started turning yesterday toward a new fight on the 2 per cent District sales tax bill, and a new decision on how big the city budget should be for the year starting July 1.

Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) announced he will confer today with Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) on the 18-million-dollar revenue bill approved by a 216-to-180 House vote Tuesday.

Subcommittees headed by Hunt and Smith teamed in first sponsorship of the sales tax plan for Washington, but Hunt said he wanted to give further study to the revised plan cleared by the House before commenting on it.

At the same time, Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.) received the Commissioners' request for restoring $3,200,000 of the $4,300,000 cut by the House from their original 103-million-dollar budget proposal for the next fiscal year.

In addition, the Commissioners urged that previous appropriations totaling $1,187,339 for construction of the new Spingarn High School for Negro children should continue to be available for starting the work. The House ordered the earlier appropriations returned to the general fund of the District so they could be spent for other purposes.

Opposing leaders in last year's Senate fight over the 2 per cent District sales tax said they were ready to reenter the fight this year.

To Back It, If Good

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) who led the fight to pass the sales tax last year, said he had not yet examined the House-approved levy. "If I can agree that it's a good sales tax, and I hope I can," said Cain, "I'll work with any group on either side of the aisle to pass it at the earliest possible time as the only constructive way to meet a dangerous deficit."

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), who led last year's successful fight to block the District sales tax, said that the House bill "hasn't passed the Senate yet and I'm going to do all I can to keep it from passing."

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) said he would oppose the District sales levy as being "a very unsound tax."

He said property tax rates and assessments here are too low, that the businessmen are not now paying their share, but that once tax rates are up to a "decent" level the Federal contribution to the District should be increased.

Army Is Reported To Have no Plans For Assigning Him To Military Duty

Brig. Gen. Gordon Young will remain on indefinitely as District Engineer Commissioner—perhaps into 1950—reliable sources at the Pentagon said yesterday.

Gen. Young

It was reported some weeks ago that Young would be soon transferred back to a military assignment. He has been a District Commissioner since the fall of 1945, and the tours of Engineer Commissioners—although "at the pleasure of the President"—rarely last more than three years.

Officially, the Department of the Army said yesterday that "no orders had been prepared for General Young and none are contemplated." A spokesman also said that no thought at all has been given to a successor.

3 Years Until Retirement

Unimpeachable but unofficial sources informed The Washington Post that under present plans Young will keep his District assignment indefinitely, probably at least through the end of the year.

Military circles heard that either the White House or the District Commissioners asked for the veteran Engineer Corps officer to be retained and the Department of the Army consented. While this could not be confirmed, it was learned that the Commissioners made no such request, at least not formally.

Young has another three years to go before retirement, and is expected to be given another military job when he leaves his present job.

Police Report Confession in Safe Lifting

One of two men arrested early yesterday on a housebreaking charge confessed that he and another man removed a safe containing $400 from Howard University over the weekend, police reported last night.

Charles W. Johnson, 18, of 1528 3d st. nw., and William McKeever, 19, of 24½ Hanover st. nw., were charged with attempting to enter the Seafood Grill, New Jersey ave. and P st. nw., at 4:15 a. m. yesterday.

Detective Sergt. Edwin F. Talbot and Precinct Detective Andrew J. Gerber, who investigated, said McKeever, on being questioned, disclosed details of the safe robbery.

He implicated Charles A. Porter, 19, of 1311 Stevens rd. se., who was booked with McKeever on a housebreaking charge.

Police said they found an empty safe Sunday morning in a parking lot in the 5200 block of E st. se. The burglary at Howard University was reported to police Monday, and the safe was identified as one taken from a university cafeteria.

Glazier's Death Laid to Drowning

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday that an autopsy on the body of Clarence W. Offenbacher, 43, found Tuesday in the Potomac River, showed death was due to drowning. Dr. MacDonald said there were no signs of violence but that he was withholding a death certificate until the homicide squad has completed its investigation.

Offenbacher, a glazier, had been missing from his home, at 809 H st. nw., since March 13. It was estimated that his body had been in the water for about two weeks.

Sleepy Belvoir GI Held on 3 Counts Of Housebreaking

Alexandria police yesterday arrested an 18-year-old Fort Belvoir soldier who, they said, admitted breaking into three homes in the Rosemont area recently — and sleeping in one overnight.

Identified by police as Pvt. George H. Brown, attached to the 410th Construction Battalion, the youth was charged with three counts of housebreaking. He is scheduled to appear in Alexandria Police Court this morning for preliminary hearing.

Police said he told them he stayed overnight at 101 W. Rosemont ave. after stealing an old coin collection. He knew the family was away because of an accumulation of newspapers on the front steps.

Bond of $1000 Set In French Horn Theft

Arthur Rookard, 41, was ordered held yesterday under $1000 bond on a charge of stealing a $400 French horn from Vincent Stagliano, 2030 F st. nw., a National Symphony musician.

Rookard waived preliminary hearing in Municipal Court. The horn was taken from Stagliano's automobile Tuesday while he was dining at a local steak house, according to police.

Want a White House Souvenir? Commission May Have 'em

Looking for a souvenir from the White House?

Maybe an old nail, or a sliver of wood, or a partly charred timber, or some antique hardware?

You'll have to take it up with the commission that President Truman says should be set up to supervise the White House remodeling.

Disposing of the historically valuable but structurally shaky, debris that will be ripped out of the Executive Mansion to make way for its reconstruction has been listed as one of the duties of the proposed commission.

Hearings on a bill to establish the commission began yesterday before the House Public Works Committee, headed by Representative William M. Whittington (D., Miss.) The hearing will continue at 9:30 a. m. today

The commission would have six members, two Senators, two members of the House, and two persons named by the President.

Representative George A. Dondero (R., Mich.) served notice he would seek to make the bill say that the commission is to be bipartisan. He said he assumed that to be President Truman's intention. Dondero is former chairman and now ranking minority member of the committee.

Approval of the bill, with probably some changes, was forecast by committee members of both parties.

Mistrial Ordered for Blake By Court in Gant Murder Case

A mistrial in the case of Edward J. Blake, 21, of Fairmont Heights, Md., one of three men being tried in District Court for a robbery-murder, was directed yesterday by Judge Edward M. Curran.

The ruling came after Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, the District's chief alienist, and his assistant, Dr. Amino Perretti, had testified that Blake was an imbecile.

Judge Curran decided that Blake did not have the necessary mentality to form a criminal intent. Blake will remain in District Jail pending further mental proceedings.

Blake had been brought to trial with John B. Greenleaf, 37, of Fairmont Heights, and Leroy L. Smith, 25, of Landover, Md., charged with murdering John Gant, 53, of 6105 Eads st. ne., during a robbery last September 15 in the 1600 block of Dix st. ne.

Police alleged Greenleaf made a statement in which he admitted striking Gant over the head with a brick. During the trial, however, Greenleaf said he did not remember signing a statement. Smith has denied any involvement.

Concluding arguments by counsel in the trial began yesterday and Judge Curran expects to charge the jury this morning. If convicted, Greenleaf and Smith face the death penalty.

1500 Gather For Hadassah Donor Dinner

Approximately 1200 persons gathered at the Mayflower Hotel last night to attend the eighteenth annual donor dinner of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah. Aubrey S. Eban, the Israeli representative to the United Nations, was the guest speaker.

Mr. Eban, in discussing the tasks and prospects for the new Near Eastern state, reviewed briefly the year of Israeli independence and termed the securing of peaceful relations with the Arab nations as one of the most important tasks before the new nation.

Although he made no comment on the reported Syrian army seizure yesterday of the Damascus government, he said that Syria has an obligation to negotiate peace terms with Israel irrespective of the nature of its government. (The United Press reported the Syrian army taking over the Damascus government with all signs indicating that the coup was designed to block any peace agreement with Israel. The toppled government was reported planning to negotiate an armistice.)

Following the dinner and address, there was a dance for the Hadassah members and friends with Miss Ingrid Rypinksi and Norman Atkins providing intermission entertainment.

Among the guests at the dinner were Mrs. Eban, Senator Alexander Wiley, Senator and Mrs. Elbert Thomas, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas, Representative and Mrs. Emanuel Celler, Representative and Mrs. Abraham J. Multer, Representative Earl Chudoff, Representative Louis Heller, Joseph C. Satterthwaite, director of the Office of Near Eastern and African Affairs of the State Department, and Mrs. Satterthwaite, Professor Arveh Feigenbaum of Hebrew University, and Mrs. Feigenbaum.

Also, Uriel Heyd, first secretary of the Israeli Embassy, and Mrs. Heyd; Arthur Liverhant, second secretary of the Israeli Embassy; Rabbi and Mrs. Isidore Breslau, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Freedman, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hare, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fahy.

Mrs. Nicklas Dies at 73 of Heart Attack

Mrs. Edna Wilson Nicklas, 73, wife of David Edward Nicklas, died after a heart attack yesterday in their home at 1565 44th st. nw.

Mrs. Nicklas had been a District resident since 1912, when her husband became the Washington representative of the Sharpe & Dohme drug company of Philadelphia. He retired three years ago.

Mrs. Nicklas lived in Punxsutawney, Pa., until she moved to Washington. She was a member of the Foxhall Village Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home Society and of the National Memorial Baptist Church.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Nicklas is survived by a son, Dr. E. W. Nicklas, 5112 Lowell la. nw.; a daughter, Mrs. J. W. Buffington, Norfolk, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Jacob L. Fisher, Punxsutawney.

Adm. Richey Dies; Assigned Here 1943-45

New York, March 30 (AP).—Rear Admiral Thomas Beall Richey, retired, 61, was found dead today on the floor of his room in the New York Yacht Club.

Police said he died of natural causes.

A native of Capon Road, Shenandoah County, Va., Admiral Richey attended Augusta Military Academy and was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1909.

He served in navy yards and stations at New Orleans, Philadelphia, San Diego, Boston and Mare Island. From 1941 to 1943 he was manager of the Norfolk Navy Yard.

He was attached to the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington from 1943 to 1945, when he retired from active duty. While he was in Washington, Admiral Richey's wife, Mrs. Katherine Fowler Richey, ran a unique business of restoring worn and battle-torn flags.

A son, Thomas B. Richey, jr., was notified in Niagara Falls, N. Y., of his father's death.

Pfc. Floyd R. Ives

Owners of Tour Homes Feted

Five of the city's leading hostesses entertained at a joint luncheon yesterday honoring a group of women who will lend their houses and embassies for the annual house and embassy tour April 9. The tour is a fund-raising benefit for the Washington Home for Incurables.

Hostesses for the merci event at the United Nations Club yesterday were Mrs. George Mesta, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Henry T. Bodman and Mrs. George Maurice Morris.

Among the guests of honor present were Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador; Mrs. Harry T. Andrews, wife of the Ambassador of the Union of South Africa; Mme. Mello-Franco, wife of the Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy; Mrs. Charles N. Thompkins, whose residence also is being shown.

House owners who are lending their homes for the tour honored in absentia at the luncheon included Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador; Mme. Ala, wife of the Iranian Ambassador; Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador; Mrs. Louis Denfeld, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, and Mrs. Leland Harrison.

Present also to receive a pat on the back for work on the benefit were Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Mrs. William S. Farr, Mrs. Robert M. Griffin, Mrs. Reeve Hoover, Mrs. Andrew S. Keck, Mrs. David Karrick, Mrs. Raymond E. Lee, Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson, Mrs. William L. Ritchie, Mrs. Lloyd B. vanda Linda and Mrs. Gordon R. Young.

Georgetown Tours Begin Tomorrow

Hostesses will be stationed in all 16 houses to be open tomorrow and Saturday from 2 to 6 p. m. for the annual Georgetown House Tour of which Mrs. Irvin D. Foos is chairman.

Mrs. Carroll Perry, jr., and Mrs. G. L. Nicolson, chairmen of hostesses for the two-day tour, proceeds from which go to the social welfare department of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown Parish, announce the following hostesses for the eight houses to be shown to visitors tomorrow. At the residence of the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Andrew Ten Eyck will be in charge; Mrs. Harold Burnside has taken over the home of Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther; Mrs. J. Russell McQueen the Drew Pearson house on Dumbarton ave.; Mrs. H. C. Kilpatrick, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury; Miss Mary Wilkins at Mrs. John Boit's; Mrs. Peyton R. Evans at the Lawrence Baker house; Mrs. Fontaine C. Bradley, the Frank Wisner residence, and Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, the Walter C. Louchheim, jr., house.

Saturday hostesses, each conversant with the period and furnishings of the last eight tour houses, will be Miss Lena Wilkins at the James Pomeroy Kendrick house on Volta pl.; Mrs. Hilbert Jenison and Mrs. John Stuart Hamilton at the Yellow Tavern, owned by Mrs. Sidney Small and now occupied by Mrs. W. A. Stebbins; Mrs. Richard Ivins at the Edward A. Bacon house; Mrs. Charles E. Seller at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. Howland Chase; Mrs. Francis L. Kiep at the Francis Colt de Wolf house, known in early days as the Bodisco house; Mrs. J. H. Lapish, the home of Col. and Mrs. Alf Heiberg, recently restored and furnished; Mrs. Horace White, the H. O. H. Frelinghuysen house, and Mrs. Edward Dies, the home of Mrs. McCook Knox, one of the handsome residences of Georgetown, filled with treasures.

Tickets are on sale at the Willard and Statler hotels, the Francis Scott Key Bookshop at 28th and O sts., and other community shops.

Navy Man Is Baffled by His Fiancee, Who Hurt Him With Three Cold, Trite, Unloving Letters, After He Told Her to Become Mature

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been engaged for over a year to a girl I love very deeply. The wedding is set for June. I am in the Navy, have been for six years, and seldom get off to visit her.

The only way we might see each other is for her to travel to my station, but she claims that she is afraid to travel alone, that she might get lost. This bothers me, for she will have to travel much, with or without me, after marriage. And what will she do then?

Often she says, "Mother doesn't think I should travel so much, it costs too much." But when I offered to send her a gift-check, to pay her fare to see me on our engagement anniversary, she said she hadn't time, due to wedding preparations.

Girl Thinks They're Too Young to Marry

SOME MONTHS ago I got back from a long voyage, wired Jane the exact time when I would arrive in her town, and asked her to meet the train. She wasn't there when I got in; and when I asked why, she said she was "too tired." I think she has been tied to her mother's apronstrings all her life.

After marriage we should be anchored for at least a year, and Jane wants a five-room apartment and a dog. I explained it wasn't that simple; that we'd be fortunate to have a two-room apartment at present prices, and it's impossible to keep a dog in an apartment, or in moving about. Jane's response was three cold boring letters, without a word of love; and when I asked why, she said I had hurt her when I told her to adopt a mature outlook on life.

She said she often thought we were too young for marriage, but to forgive her if she had hurt me, as she did it because she loved me so much—which is pretty mixed up. I think she was having revenge, like a frustrated child, making me suffer for offending her ego, in telling her in a general way to grow up, that life isn't a bowl of cherries, and that a Navy wife has to be mature. What do you think of the whole picture? R. A.

Man's a Martinet; Girl Seems Shrewd

DEAR R. A.: I have a hunch that you are a Naval officer, probably not long out of school and still pretty starchy about rank; and that your manner with Jane has a martinet ring, which causes her to feel that she has to corral you on terms of "unconditional surrender" or find herself walked on in the final assessment.

Maybe she is tied to her mother's apronstrings. Or maybe she is just a smart cookie in her own right, granite, shallow and sugar-coated, hardboiled and advantage-seeking, who refuses to run at your beck and call, and gives childish excuses for her balkiness, because she figures that's the way to lasso and tame your type of man.

For instance, her refusal to be a ship-follower prior to marriage is shrewd feminine finesse, whether it is Jane's idea or her mother's dictate. Maybe you don't like it, but it boosts her stock with you nevertheless. It keeps your interest at fever-pitch, even while you're fumbling, month after month, with additional evidence that "a marriage of true minds" isn't in the cards.

Unhappy Union in the Making

HERE is what I see: Jane isn't in love with you, but she wants to marry and rates you a good catch; so she is wavering moodily, wondering whether she's making a mistake, and meantime occasionally "taking out" on you her discontent with her current empty existence.

She lacks love-incentive to try to be a good Navy wife to you; and if she goes through with the marriage she will want all sorts of pampering to compensate for her "sacrifice"—or condescension. As for you, I think you are in love with an illusion, not with Jane's real qualities; and that you need more help than she can give, in order to arrive at maturity yourself. I believe a mesalliance is in the making; so, are you prepared to take the consequences without bleating? M. H.

How to Make a Long, Narrow Room Look More Attractive

The long, narrow living room is not an easy room to make homelike and every effort should be made to do away with that long look. Instead of using rugs in this type room you will find it will increase the width to carpet the room to the baseboard. Then cut across one of the narrow ends by putting your davenport cross wise with a table in back of it. Careful planning of the furniture can do much towards making it a squarer, more homelike room.

A Bit of Yolk

If you have difficulty when separating eggs and a little of the yolk gets into the white, moisten the corner of a clean towel or napkin and scoop out the yolk with this. Never try to whip the whites with that bit of yolk in them as they probably will never whip stiff.

Trim Styles Today Stress Slim Waists

By Ida Jean Kain

SWING through spring with a slim waist. Even though you're off to a bulky start, by the time spring is really on the wing your waist can be willowy and slim.

With a three-way program, you can't miss. Clip the calories that crowd the waist, tone the muscles that band the waist . . . and, for a smooth finishing touch, use the designers' sleight-of-hand tricks to belittle the middle measurement.

On the calorie score, there is one sure way to keep from adding the padding—stop eating just short of "full." The easiest way is simply to leave off the rich dessert.

To lop off calories in a hurry, cut fats to the vanishing point. Trim the fat from all meats, skip gravy and go light on salad dressing. Choose either potatoes or bread with a meal, but do not take both.

FLEXIBILITY makes for a slimmer waist, so here's a two-way stretch. . . .

Position: Standing, in good posture.

Movement: Stretch right arm up over head, and at the same time stretch the right leg back, toe on floor. Make it a thorough-going stretch. Then stretch all along the other side. Repeat slowly, 3 to 6 times on each side.

Now add a side-bend. . . .

Movement: Pulling slim through the middle, bend to the side and try to touch fingers of left hand to wall. Repeat 3 times, slowl, and with a big stretch. Then 3 times on the other side.

THEN use the slimming tricks of the designers trade. The long, unbroken princess line, with no belt in front, is made to order for slimming the middle measurement. A dress gently tapered at the waist with a couple of diagonal darts and a narrow self-material belt can make a chubby waistline appear slim. Shiny surfaces are not slenderizing, so no shiny belts, or brightly-colored belts, or wide belts. When the belt contrasts, it should be darker than the dress.

Strictly avoid two-tone dresses that change color at the waist, and wide inserts of satin through the midriff. Tweed suits with short jackets seem to add pounds to the stocky figure. Wool sharkskin, fitting smoothly through the middle measurement, is positively slimming.

PEGGY PRESTON

Sophisticated Juniors

THE slogan "A Junior is a size, not an age," makes important sense in these high-styled Juniors, designed for the mature woman who because of her petite stature, cannot wear regulation sizes. Sophisticated and sure, these frocks belie the name of Juniors. They are scaled along smaller lines than their counterparts in the size range of 12 to 20, but have none of the childlike touches that so often characterize the 9 to 15 groups.

New version of the shirtwaist dress is depicted above, in a navy and white zebra-striped crepe. Butterfly sleeves are bracelet length, with turned cuff of navy, matching the collar. Bright orange of tie at neckline is repeated in the trimming on the large straw cartwheel. Both costumes pictured are available at Erlebacher's.

Learning by Experience

Though those who know most about the way children learn tell us that first-hand experience results in the most effective sort of learning, it isn't easy for parents to knew how far they should go. Obviously, we aren't being sensible if we allow a young child to play with a sharp knife. Nor would we stand by if he started sticking a hairpin into an electric outlet. While he might learn from either of these experiences, the dangers outweigh the value of what might be learned.

On the other hand, we parents do interfere overmuch with sound ways of learning. The actual experience of touching a hot radiator or stove gives the toddler a much clearer idea of what is meant by "hot" than any verbal approach. As children grow older, they continue to need to find out many things for themselves. If they dawdle with dressing, they'll be late to school. Usually it is better for them to have to meet that situation than to be checked-up on and thus continue to leave the responsibility in parents' hands. So with home work, taking care of animals and many other things.

Though parents should stand by and see that extreme penalties are not incurred as youngsters are learning, the first-hand experience of having to face the results of one's own carelessness or lack of judgment brings the kind of learning that lasts.

'This Is Paris' Air Show Gives Fashion News

With a flip of your radio dial tonight you can tune in on what's what in fashions in the French capital.

"This Is Paris," featuring some of the most famous names in the fashion world, makes its local debut at 10 p. m. over radio station WOL. The program, transcribed at the Cafe de la Paix in Paris, will be presented each week at this time, and will present Maurice Chevalier and his guests along with prominent couturiers.

Star of tonight's show will be Gaumont Lanvin, head of the House of Lanvin, a dressmaking establishment first begun 60 years ago by his aunt, Jeanne Lanvin.

The House of Lanvin has always stressed fashion of youth and femininity, and M. Lanvin promises to give his listeners cues on his methods of achieving that "youthful line and look."

Chief among the ideas he will talk about is the use of colorful scatter pins on simple, head-huggings bonnets; a spray of sweetheart roses or a bunch of violets tucked under the lapel of a high-standing collar; crisp white pique or fragile organdy dickies to fill in the new scoop necklines of dresses; a touch of velvet on a costume.

Most of the fashion ideas mentioned on this and succeeding programs will be put to practical use by stylists at the Hecht Co., which is sponsoring the series.

West Point Wives Give Fashion Show

Wives of West Point class of '42 ushered in the spring season and "1949 look" when they give a fashion show and tea yesterday at the Army-Navy Country Club. Guests of the wives of 1942 class members and wives of the class of 1943 attended. Helen Waldron styles were shown.

Club members serving as models under the direction of Mrs. Ralph J. White, were Mrs. Lawrence A. Adams, Mrs. William C. Plott, Mrs. Lucius D. Clay, jr., Mrs. Jere Maupin, Mrs. Mahlon E. Gates, Mrs. Richard C. Miles and Mrs. Willis D. Crittenberger, jr. Mrs. William C. Lawrence and Mrs. James F. C. Hyde presided at the tea table.

If You'd Look Lovely in June . . Start Your Beauty Program Now

If you are to be a just-before-summer bride, begin your special program of planned beauty care right now, says the April "Beauty and Brides'" issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl.

Follow a steadfast schedule which pays attention to the minutest details—enough sleep, plenty of fresh air and a well-balanced diet. Assign yourself exercises for slimming. Become more critical of your posture.

From now on, give your hair double its daily quota of brush strokes, coaxing out every high light. Now is the time to have your hair sheared and shaped, and permanented on the ends, so that it will be completely soft and natural looking for the big day. Schedule the final shampoo and set 48 hours before the ceremony.

Care faithfully for your hands.

Assemble a trousseau of fragrances, with perfume, soap, and Cream them every night, and apply lotion after every washing. dusting powder all in the same scent.

Stage a make-up rehearsal the day before the ceremony, so that the following day your preparations will be smooth and tranquil, suggests Charm. Apply make-up skillfully, using only what is needed to heighten your sparkle and your look of misty freshness.

On the Docket

Young Falls Church Club Wins 6 Firsts

THE Woman's Club of Falls Church, which is only 18 months old, took six first-place honors at the fourteenth annual institute of the Fourth District of the Virginia Federation of Woman's Club, yesterday at the Alexandria Community Center.

Of the 26 senior and junior clubs in the 16 counties of District 4, the Falls Church club was credited with the best attendance during the past year. Its attendance was set at 52 per cent. The Woman's Club of Clarenford, Arlington, came in second with a 33.5 per cent attendance. The best attended junior club was the Junior Woman's Club of Arlington with a 18.1 per cent record.

The Falls Church club showed the biggest increase in attendance since the last annual meeting. The same club won another award for its 100 per cent increase in membership.

Other attendance awards were given to the Page County Woman's Club and the Page County Junior Woman's Club for having regularly attending members coming the longest distances to the meetings. Mrs. W. Fred Jordan, credentials chairman for the Fourth District, announced the awards and made the presentations.

First prize in the fine arts contest went to the Falls Church Woman's Club, also, for the painting, "The Whippoorwill," by Mrs. Robert Bruskin, a member of the club. Mrs. Roy C. Bragg's painting, "Tea in the Attic" took second place for the Alexandria Women's Club, and Mrs. Rea Shover came in third for the Waycroft Woman's Club with "The Snow Fence."

Awards were made by Mrs. Harry Kirk of the Alexandria Women's Club, who was representing Mrs. R. Corbin Dorsey of Carlyle Woman's Club, District fine arts chairman.

Mrs. Clement's Poetry Wins

Mrs. Mildred Clement, also representing the Falls Church Club, took first place in the poetry contest with her poem "Mine." Another poem by Mrs. Clement, "Inspiration," was judged third. "April Night", by Frances Street, won second place. Mrs. Fred Todd, Mrs. Fred Watton and Miss Lucille Keeton did the judging.

Entries in the scrapbook contest were judged in several classes according to the size of the clubs.

Junior Clubs Separate

The Junior Clubs were judged separately, with the Carlyle Junior Woman's Club winning in Class B; Junior Woman's Club of Manassas, Class C, and the Junior Woman's Club of Frelericksburg, Class D. Special mention for outstanding scrapbooks went to the Falls Church Club, the Loudoun Club and the Fredericksburg Junior Club and the Manassas Junior Club. Mrs. William G. Watt, District Chairman of Scrapbooks, announced the awards.

The institute was called to order yesterday morning by the district president, Mrs. Leonie Alexander Gilbert, who presided over all sessions.

Mrs. J. E. Head, district director of music, lead singing of the national anthem and then Mrs. Walter DuBois Brookings directed the salute to the flag. The invocation was presented by the Rev. Thomas A. Fraser, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

In his welcoming address Col. Everett A. Hellmuth, secretary of the Alexandria Bicentennial Commission, suggested that the club members sponsor a float for the commission's parade in May.

He also traced the history of the city, from the days in 1749 when tracts along the Potomac were auctioned off, up to the elaborate plans for celebrating its 200th birthday.

Hostesses Speak

Next on the agenda were addresses by the presidents of the two hostess clubs for the institute, Mrs. Joseph Calloway, jr., of the Alexandria Woman's Club, and Miss Edna Barr, president of the Alexandria Junior Woman's Club.

Mrs. Edward S. Barber, public information chairman of the Fourth District, also spoke briefly.

Then there were reports from Mrs. Gilbert and secretary treasurer of the district, Mrs. J. York Welborn, and from all the club presidents who attended.

One of the most interesting of these by Mrs. Jacob Vonk, president of the Woman's Club of Falls Church. She discussed her club's entry in the "Build a Better Community Contest," sponsored by the general federation and indorsed by the Kroeger grocery store chain.

The Falls Church women are campaigning for every home owner to plant at least one small pink-flowering tree in his front yard. Already 220 crab apple trees have been planted, she reported, and there have been very many dogwood and other trees, besides.

The club also has organized an "Emergency Home Closet" that lends out to the community every emergency need from hot water bottles to wheelchairs.

Quiz on Clubdom

Following the reports representatives from each club took part in an "Information Please" quiz on woman's clubdom.

Mrs. A. H. Buell of the Fortnightly Club and Library Association of Herndon came through with first place laurels. Mrs. C. P. Harrel of the Page County Woman's Club was second and Mrs. Robert W. Livingston of Lyon Village Woman's Club was third.

The quiz session was judged by Mrs. Sue Haden, president of the second district of the federation; Mrs. Irvin Hufford, vice president of the fourth district, and Mrs. Sedrick Saunders, president of the junior clubs in the fourth district. Luncheon followed the contest.

Highlight of the afternoon sessions was an address by Mrs. R. E. Reese of Wakefield, Virginia State fine arts chairman of the federation. She outlined the federation's goals in the arts.

Adelaide Johnson Tumbled Into an Elevator Shaft And a Sculpturing Career

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

ON FRIDAY evening delegates to the National Woman's Party will convene in the Capitol's crypt beside the monument to America's great women's rights pioneers, Lucretia Mott, Elizabeth Stanton Cady and Susan B. Anthony. The statue is the only monument by a woman to women in any capitol building throughout the world. Its sculptress, Adelaide Johnson, will be among the honored guests. Though her precise age is uncertain, Miss Johnson has definitely passed the century mark and actually has been an ardent equalitarian (a pleasanter word for feminist) since Civil War days! She lives with devoted friends in a house within a block of the Capitol. Though she uses a cane, she gets around with considerable zip. Her hearing, sight are intact; she rises at 6 a.m. to read the newspapers. Her hair, which once swept the ground like the magnificent manes of the Seven Sutherland Sisters of hair tonic fame, coils in ample gray coronet atop a soft white pompadour. She looks no more than an unwrinkled 70 and attributes her strength to an inner, spiritual vision—and to the fact to ease a slim, student days budget, she ate little for years but onion sandwiches.

The daughter of a Plymouth (Ill.) farmer, she supported herself for seven years by wood-carving. Wood-carving led naturally to sculpture but Miss Johnson couldn't afford lessons—until a curious accident changed her life. In the Chicago Central Music Hall she fell down an elevator shaft, 15 feet to a concrete floor. Her hip was broken badly, the right leg shrunk six inches shorter than the left. Though lawyers tried to make her settle for a small sum the lawsuit she instituted, Miss Johnson refused all offers, held out, and was finally awarded $15,000. Though doctors tried to make her wear hideous orthopedic shoes, she refused to—and managed a miracle. Today her legs are equal in length!

Her Husband Took Her Name

THOUGH it's now pretty well forgotten, Miss Johnson was once "blissfully" married. She never lost her identity or even changed her name for the simple but extraordinary reason her husband assumed hers! Her husband was British, 12 years younger and they were married at what must have been a fascinating ceremony. The bride wore white satin, of course, and so did the groom! A white satin suit! Susan B. Anthony and a huge assemblage of admirers were in attendance. Asked why her husband had taken her name, Miss Johnson replied it was done to show that women didn't have to take a man's name. Pressed further on how she had persuaded her bridegroom to take this step, she answered calmly and with deadly wisdom" "When you're in love, you do anything."

When the statue to the women's rights pioneers was unveiled in the Capitol crypt back in 1921, 8000 would-be spectators were turned away. Miss Johnson received around 1400 guests. It was the first time a woman had ever been given a reception in the Capitol. For the occasion Miss Johnson wore, over a white dress, a white whipcord cape, her own design, frogged in white satin. The cape had great elan—and so has Miss Johnson!

About Redyeing Leather Jacket

I recently bought my 4-year-old a fairly cheap green leather jacket. It faded dreadfully with the first dry cleaning. It is also scuffing badly. Have you any suggestions for redyeing it myself, and also to further preserve the leather. Z.

You can redye the leather by using a leather dye. It is possible to spread the dye more evenly if it is applied while the leather is damp. If after the first dyeing, the color is not smooth, dye it again—sometimes three or four coats are needed to get an even dye job. Before the leather is entirely dry, soften it by working between the hands. When completely dry, apply a good leather renewer. This will soften and polish the leather and keep the dye from rubbing off. The renewer is a creamy liquid made primarily for renewing shoes. Since a four year old's jacket gets hard wear, it would be wise to frequently apply the renewer to prevent further fading and scuffing.

I have an old kitchen which I cannot have remodeled for a year or two. In the meantime I must do something about the floor. The only size in a linoleum rug that is practicable would necessitate moving radiator, sink, etc., and would leave a wide margin of bare floor. What do you think of a couple of coats of a good deck paint for the entire floor? What about waxing it after painting it? What is the disadvantage of a floor of that kind that one so seldom (if ever) sees a bare painted floor? Any other suggestions? P. C.

Bare painted floors are not generally used in kitchens because in that room, floors are subjected to heavy wear and frequent cleanings. This wears away the paint and as soon as the bare wood is exposed, it rapidly absorbs soil, becomes roughened, generally unsightly, and hard to care for. As a temporary measure, however, painting would be a solution to your problem. Before painting, be sure the floor is free from soil and wax by wiping with a good grease solvent. The floor should also be smoothed by sanding, if it not already very smooth. The paint will wear off a rough floor much faster than off a smooth one. Apply at least three coats of good floor paint, floor enamel, or deck paint, allowing each coat to dry thoroughly before applying the next. Keeping the surface well waxed at all times will help to protect it from moisture, dirt, and wear. When it is necessary to wash the flopr, use a minimum of water and dry thoroughly. Using pieces of linoleum on the floor in front of the sink, stove and other heavy traffic areas will lessen wear on the paint.

Could you tell me where I could learn to string beads with knots between each two beads? What equipment is needed? Something more than needle and thread seems to be necessary to keep the knot in the right place. V. R. M.

I have been unsuccessful in finding any place where instructions in this craft can be obtained. However, here is a suggestion which might be helpful to you: Run the needle, with which you are stringing the beads, through the loop of the string in such a way as to make a knot. Now, before pulling the knot tight, put the needle in the knot and hold the needle tight against the end of the last bead strung. Pull the string to tighten the knot around the needle in this position. When tight, remove the needle. This should place the knot close to the last bead strung.

In answer to your recent appeal for a corned beef recipe, here is mine:

Kosher-Style Corned Beef
5 pounds beef (brisket or English-cut Chuck)
¼ pound garlic
2 teaspoons saltpeter
½ pound salt
4 ounces mixed spices
Water to cover

PUT INGREDIENTS together in crock. Lay a plate and weight over meat to keep it submerged. Soak for eight days. Rinse and cook until meat is tender. Pressure cooker is fine if piece is not too large. S. K.

Thanks to S. K., and also to H. H. G. and J. H. D., all of whom were kind enough to send in corned beef recipes.

Brand New Snack Fare Is Here

BRAND new snack fare are the small, soft oval cakes now coming from the ovens of a large local bakery. They sell six to a 15c box, generously powdered with sugar, and kept fresh by a cellophane covering. The perfect complement for the after-school and pre-bedtime glass of milk, they can also be served with fruit, ice cream or other desserts.

Bankers Hit New S. & L. Regulations

By S. Oliver Goodman

Friction between banks and savings-and-loan associations blazed into the open last night.

In a strongly worded protest, the American Bankers Association charged that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is "attempting to misrepresent the character of the Federal savings and loan associations, to mislead the public, and to usurp the legislative prerogatives of Congress . . . "

Specifically, the bankers' group objects to an attempt by the FHLB to have its member associations call themselves "Federal savings associations," describe their shares as "saving accounts," issue "certificates of deposit," and open branch offices.

The new rules and regulations against which the A. B. A. protests were promulgated by the FHLB in the March 11 issue of the Federal Register. Unless withdrawn by the FHLB as a result of the protest, the new rules are scheduled to go into effect April 11.

The ABA brief characterizes the new regulations as "a deliberate attempt to mislead the public." It cites the debate in Congress over the Home Owners Loan Act of 1933 to show that the concept was the establishment of local home loan associations in which people may invest their funds for the purpose of financing the ownership of homes.

"The conclusion is inescapable," the A. B. A. brief says, "that Congress in providing that these institutions should be known as 'Federal savings and loan associations' intended to make certain that the public would not be misled as to their nature and would be able to distinguish these institutions from fundamentally different types of financial institutions such as mutual savings banks."

Would My Job Be Odd Enough For Them?

Ever since I interviewed the executives of the Westgate Odd Jobs Co. on my radio program, I've been getting phone calls from people who want to hire them but can't remember their address or telephone number.

To save myself a lot of trouble answering the phone, here's the dope.

They're a couple of 17-year-olds—Hank Offterdinger of 207 Newport ave. (Wisconsin 6708) and Wendell Tascher of 305 Newport ave. (Wisconsin 3712).

They tackle any odd job once, from washing dishes to trimming hedges. For 75 cents a day they offered to write my column.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Don Knowles of 5016 3d st. nw. is intrigued by an item in one of our afternoon contemporaries about a proposed pay increase for Municipal Court judges. It said:

"The Municipal Court's chief judge would be raised from $10,000 a year to $9975."

If the measure passes, I certainly hope it doesn't set a precedent.

I'm reminded of Vice President Barkley's famous story about the fellow who was about to be ridden out of town on a rail by a group of vigilantes. As they started off with him, the poor guy murmured:

"If it wasn't for the honor of the thing, fellows, I'd just as soon walk."

MISCELLANY

Hasty motorists are warned that energetic Motorcycle Policeman Cave is now operating on Massachusetts ave., near Ward Circle . . . Gordon W. McBride of 219 Raymond st., Chevy Chase, Md., wonders whether transit radio will now be followed by another modern convenience—electric outlets to permit male passengers to shave on buses and streetcars, while en route to work . . . Jim Wilfong, jr., of 1541 Montana ave. ne., wonders why "leadership" does not appear in his unabridged Merriam-Webster but is listed in the smaller "Collegiate" dictionary put out by the same folks . . . The Young Women's Christian Association needs some upright pianos, for its practice rooms. During 1948, the YWCA estimates that its girls put in 24,000 hours of pounding the ivories. Anybody who has an upright to donate is asked to call Metropolitan 2100 and ask for the music office . . . I guess I might as well quit protesting that "I used that one years ago," and pass along the "latest" version of the Pyramid Club. In this one (a throwback to an old chain-letter parody) you bundle up your wife and send her to the name at the top of the list. The winner gets 15,188 women—and you're warned not to break the chain because one fellow who broke it got his own wife back . . . The only thing in town that's circulating as fast as the Pyramid jokes is the "Waldorf-Astoria Devil's Food Cake Recipe," which gives every appearance of being the best publicity stunt of the year . . . The other day Walter Haight used a story about putting an oar on his shoulder and walking inland until somebody would ask "What's that thing?" A reader suggests that I ought to tell Walter that his story dates back to Homer, who pinned it on Odysseus, in one of the closing books of the "Odyssey." If I know Walter, his reply is going to be: "What's 'Homer'—a book about Babe Ruth?"

WHITEWASH?

On Monday of this week, Danny Maher was assigned to help his old pal, Maj. Robert Barrett, with "certain phases" of the gambling investigation.

On Tuesday, Major Barrett announced that Maher would make a report of the situation, and that he expected the report to show that the police have done more to curb gambling than has District Attorney Fay.

This announcement should prove very helpful to Danny. Now that he knows what he's expected to prove, his study of the situation should be greatly simplified.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Very cute and affectionate puppy, 12 weeks old." (Elmwood 879, McLean, Va.)

"Very dignified, completely housebroken all-white male cat; also black and white male Persian cat. Will deliver." (Union 3555 after 7 p. m.)

CAUSE AND EFFECT

Noses get red, and at times they get blue

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Diplomats Await Pay Increase

By Drew Pearson

One of the few pieces of legislation passed to date by the 81st Congress was a bill just about doubling the President's salary and housekeeping allowance. Meanwhile, American diplomats, stationed on the first line of defense, are still hopefully waiting for their promised but pitifully small increase of $330 a year.

PEARSON

This increase was tied to the bill boosting the President's pay check. For last year all other Federal employes had been given a raise—but not U. S. diplomatic personnel abroad. Some of them, beginning on a salary as low as $2000, can barely make both ends meet, and are supposed to keep up proper appearances as representatives of the great United States.

A bulletin recently sent to these employes quoted Senator Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts as saying: "Americans in the foreign service need to have great pride in their country. And it should be a pride that shows through, that reflects the true worth of the American way of life."

However, the President's salary boost was passed by Congress while the struggling, run-of-the-mine United States diplomat abroad got none. Furthermore, the ritzy boys with drag at the top came out fairly well. Their allowances weren't cut. But because the Budget Bureau sliced the State Department even below last year, many of the poorly paid, struggling young diplomats at the bottom had $100 cut off their living and rental allowances.

Note—One reason the American diplomatic service has been so notoriously inept is that it has been so underpaid. Only wealthy men could afford to become career diplomats, and wealth does not necessarily mean brains.

He Who Gets Spanked

Long-shanked House majority leader John McCormack can be a rough antagonist when he gets warmed up, but seldom has he been in such fighting form as during a lecture on racial intolerance the other day.

His target was race-baiting, rabble-rousing Representative John Rankin of Mississippi, who had just delivered a speech singling out Israel, along with the continents of Europe, Asia and Africa, as a "sinkhole" into which we are "pouring" relief funds.

Angrily McCormack told Rankin to "sit down." Then he blistered: "I have no feeling against anyone because of accident of birth. I was not consulted when I was brought into this world, neither was anyone else and I do not think accident of birth should operate against anyone.

"A man's racial origin means nothing to me, a person's name means nothing to me. A person's religion I respect. But what does mean everything to me is a person's mind.

"And when I meet a person with a bigoted mind, I am meeting a person I do not like, a person I have nothing but contempt for."

This Is Not Backstage News

Some of us newspapermen are so busy calling attention to things that don't go right in the world that we underplay news about people who are helping to make the world a better place to live in. So here is some news about the folks who may not hold public office, who may not be famous outside their own community, but who nevertheless are making everyday human news as Servants of Brotherhood:

George L. Stahl, Sunbury, Pa., who runs a hotel in a coal-mining town where at one time they spoke 17 different languages, and who by his unselfish levotion to his community has endeared himself to his fellowmen. In Sunbury, there's almost too much of "Let George do it."

Ambrose Crass, Murfreesboro, Tenn. a retired 76-year-old printer who hasn't been content to retire when it comes to working for others, and who is found making the rounds for other people whenever there's work to be done.

Mrs. Ella Allen of Fort Smith, Ark., and the 32 children who have formed a Servants of Brotherhood Club to foster the basic principles of brotherhood.

Mrs. Robert C. Loving, Philadelphia, a widow who now devotes the affection she once lavished on her family visiting the sick in the hospitals of Philadelphia until she is known to thousands as "Mother "Loving" and truly exemplifies the name she bears.
